WORLD
Far-right, Greens make gains in EU Parliament election
Page 12

AUTO RACING
Pagenaud outduels Rossi for his 1st Indy 500 victory
Page 31

FACES
‘Sonic the Hedgehog’ movie delayed due to character redesign
Page 17

Army leveraging VR market for plug-and-play battle simulation » Page 3

STARS

Stripes

At odds
Trump breaks with Japan’s Abe, his own advisers on North Korean missile tests

By Jill Colvin and Darlene Superville
Associated Press
TOKYO — President Donald Trump said Monday he is not “personally” bothered by recent short-range missile tests that North Korea conducted this month, breaking with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe, who is hosting the president on a four-day state visit full of pageantry.

Standing beside Trump at a news conference after hours of talks, Abe disagreed with the U.S. president, saying the missile tests violated U.N. Security Council resolutions and were “of great regret.” Abe, who has forged a strong friendship with Trump and agrees with him on many issues, is concerned because the short-range missiles pose a threat to Japan’s security.

Trump was invited to Japan to be the first world leader to meet with its new emperor. Despite being far from Washington, he didn’t miss the chance to lob another broadside against former Vice President Joe Biden, one of the Democrats seeking to challenge Trump in next year’s presidential election. North Korea’s Kim Jong Un recently criticized Biden as having a low IQ, and Trump told the world he agreed with the authoritarian leader’s assessment.

The visit was designed to highlight the U.S.-Japan alliance and showcase the warm relations between the leaders. Trump said he and Abe deliberated over economic issues, including trade and Iran, during hours of talks at the Akasaka Palace, but North Korea’s recent firing of short-range missiles emerged as an area of disagreement.

When asked if he was bothered by the missile tests, Trump said: “No, I’m not. I am personally not.”

The Republican president has sought to downplay the significance of the missile tests, even though his own national security adviser, John Bolton, said over the weekend that they violated U.N. resolutions.

Trump continued to hold out hope of getting Kim to agree to give up his nuclear weapons and ballistic missiles despite two summits he’s had with the North Korean leader that produced no concrete pledge to denuclearize the peninsula.

Trump praised Kim, calling him a “smart man” who might have launched the missiles earlier this month to “get attention.”

SEE TRUMP ON PAGE 4

Tornadoes hit 2 Okla. locations; at least 2 dead

By Tim Talley and Sue Ogrocki
Associated Press
EL RENO, Okla. — A tornado leveled a motel and tore through a mobile home park near Oklahoma City overnight, killing two people and injuring at least 29 others before a second twister raked a suburb of Tulsa more than 100 miles away, authorities said Sunday.

The first tornado touched down in El Reno, about 25 miles west of Oklahoma City, late Saturday night. It crossed an interstate and walloped the American Budget Value Inn before ripping through the Skyview Estates trailer park, flipping and leveling homes, Mayor Matt White said at a news conference.

“It’s a tragic scene out there,” White said, adding later that, “People have absolutely lost everything.” He said the city established a GoFundMe site, the City of El Reno Tornado Relief Fund, for affected families. Several other businesses were also damaged, though not to the same extent as the motel.

The two people who were killed were in the mobile home park, White said. He did not provide additional details about them. The 29 people who were injured were taken to hospitals, where some were undergoing surgery. Some of the injuries were deemed critical, he said.

The National Weather Service gave the tornado an EF3 rating, meaning it had wind speeds of 136-165 mph. Personnel who investigated the damage said the tornado began around 10:28 p.m.

SEE TORNADOES ON PAGE 7

INSIDE: North Korea calls Bolton a ‘warmonger’ over missile tests comment Page 4
Pvt. Nicholas Minue, 44, charged a German machine-gun nest that pinned down his company in Tunisia, killing 10 enemy soldiers and driving others from their dug-out positions before he was fatally wounded.

His courageous action on April 28, 1943, inspired his company to aggressively advance and push the enemy combatants — who were part of German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel’s forces — from the sector.

Minue received a posthumous Medal of Honor. He is buried at the North Africa American Cemetery in Tunisia, where a Memorial Day ceremony Monday paid tribute to him and the many others who died in Africa fighting fascism.

“We gather today to honor the memory of those who came before us, to recognize the shared sacrifice of those who served, fought and selflessly paid the ultimate price for the freedom of others,” Vice Adm. Lisa Franchetti, the Navy’s 6th Fleet commander, said. “Many of these brave soldiers had been plucked from quaint civilian life mere months prior.”

But they rose to the challenge, and their efforts proved pivotal, she said. The Allies’ North African campaign made the Axis Powers divert troops from Europe, allowing the Red Army to gain an edge on the Eastern Front.

Tunisia is where Rommel, whose armies were depleted, retreated from Africa. The Allies’ victory there weakened the Axis and the Persian Gulf during the height of World War II.

The U.S. joined the British-led Allied Forces in North Africa in May 1942. The young, inexperienced American soldiers were thrown into a caldron for which they were ill-prepared, Franchetti said.

“The battles here were unexpectedly fierce for the Allies, especially the green American force that first made landfall on the coasts of Algeria and Morocco,” Franchetti said. “Many of these brave soldiers had been plucked from quaint civilian life mere months prior.”

But they rose to the challenge, and their efforts proved pivotal, she said. The Allies’ North African campaign made the Axis Powers divert troops from Europe, allowing the Red Army to gain an edge on the Eastern Front.

Tunisia is where Rommel, whose armies were depleted, retreated from Africa. The Allies’ victory there weakened the Axis and the Persian Gulf during the height of World War II.

The U.S. joined the British-led Allied Forces in North Africa in May 1942. The young, inexperienced American soldiers were thrown into a caldron for which they were ill-prepared, Franchetti said.

“The battles here were unexpectedly fierce for the Allies, especially the green American force that first made landfall on the coasts of Algeria and Morocco,” Franchetti said. “Many of these brave soldiers had been plucked from quaint civilian life mere months prior.”

But they rose to the challenge, and their efforts proved pivotal, she said. The Allies’ North African campaign made the Axis Powers divert troops from Europe, allowing the Red Army to gain an edge on the Eastern Front.

Tunisia is where Rommel, whose armies were depleted, retreated from Africa. The Allies’ victory there weakened the Axis and the Persian Gulf during the height of World War II.

Pence honors fallen, families at Arlington

ARLINGTON, Va. — Vice President Mike Pence has paid tribute to fallen members of the U.S. Armed Forces, thanking their loved ones in a ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery and acknowledging that for them “every day is Memorial Day.”

Pence placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns to remember dead servicemembers whose remains haven’t been identified and observed a moment of silence.

Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr. and acting Secretary of Defense Patrick Shanahan also attended.

From The Associated Press

Correction

A May 21 story misidentified the unit and position to which U.S. Army Bravo Company, 82nd Airborne Division, was assigned in France as part of the Army’s first military exchange with the nation. He will be deputy commander of France’s Marseilles-based 3rd Division.

By Scott Wyland
Stars and Stripes

Vice Adm. Lisa Franchetti, right, lays memorial wreath on Monday at the North Africa American Cemetery where she honored the thousands of soldiers who died in Africa during World War II.
Army to award contracts for VR training platform

By Wyatt Olson
Stars and Stripes

FORT SHAFTER, Hawaii — The U.S. Army will award contracts next month to produce software to run a simulated training platform that within two years will deliver “a second revolution in training” for the service, the major general overseeing the project said Thursday.

“What I think we’re going to do with the Synthetic Training Environment right now is the most revolutionary thing since developing our live training environment at our combat training centers,” Maj. Gen. Maria Gervais said during a panel she chaired at the Land Forces Pacific Symposium in Honolulu. “We see this as a second revolution in training for the United States Army.”

Gervais is deputy commanding general for combined-arms training at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., but also leads a team overseeing development of the Synthetic Training Environment system.

“We are not going to replace live training,” she told Stars and Stripes. “Live training will always be the pinnacle training. But also leads a team overseeing development of the Synthetic Training Environment system. Live training will always be the pinnacle training. But also leads a team overseeing development of the Synthetic Training Environment system.

“Fors a training event, she said. “That’s our Achilles’ heel in all of this,” she said. “If a unit needs to train and is going to deploy, wouldn’t it be great to pull that terrain in immediately and put it in the simulators? We can’t do that because of the simulators we currently have.

“We’ve had to spend all our time and effort booking them together,” Gervais said. “That’s very costly, very time-consuming, requiring lots of contractors.”

Months would be spent coordinating the 12 stationary simulators for a training event, she said. “They’re good and they met their needs previously, but they’re too costly, we can’t change them quickly and they are very hardware-based versus software-based,” she said. “That means you’d have to go to a big warehouse and would have all the simulators in it. Units have to schedule it and fight for time to use it.”

The system now underway, which is projected to reach operating capability in late 2021, leverages the virtual and gaming markets and thus will use common data and a common architecture.

By using commercial standards, the Synthetic Training Environment will be “plug-and-play” and be readily usable by soldiers, even during deployments.

“We just concluded an evaluation of the operating system,” Gervais said. “That’s going to lead to an award of contracts for the inside software.”

The Army is also awarding a contract for a virtual trainer that will simulate most of the Army’s and Marine Corps’ ground and ground vehicles, which will be used in training from the squad level to the highest echelon.

“We’ll award those contracts in June,” she said.

Groups of soldiers have been assessing the software and offering feedback.

Among them have been soldiers with the Hawaii-based 25th Infantry Division, she said.

“In an infantry soldier, you have to be able to replicate the terrain from a jungle perspective,” she said.

“We are working with the 25th so that we can test technology and get to a jungle-type environment.”

Soldiers at Fort Carson, Colo., provide feedback on aviation platforms, while tank, Bradley Fighting Vehicle and Stryker crews at Fort Riley, Kan., offered their advice, she said.

Speaking before an audience of several hundred U.S. and international soldiers Thursday, Gervais conceded that some might consider the Army’s ambitious plan for seamless, global synthetic training as “a pipedream.”

“But why do I think what I’ve seen working with industry partners and academia, I’m just going to tell you,” she said, “I think that’s hogwash.”

OlsonWyatt@stripes.com
Twitter: @WyattWolson

Naval F-35 squadron deactivated at Eglin Air Force Base

By Jim Thompson
Northwest Florida Daily News

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. — With gratitude for its seven years at Eglin and enthusiasm for the future in California, the Navy’s first F-35C fighter squadron furled its flag Thursday.

The F-35C is the “carrier variant” of the F-35 stealth fighter jet, designed specifically to operate from aircraft carriers.

“Today, we turn into the wind and launch on an aggressive path to deploy the F-35C,” said Navy Capt. Max G. McCoy, commander of the Joint Strike Fighter Wing. McCoy spoke as VFA-101, informally known as the “Grim Reapers’” squadron, was deactivated to become part of VFA-125, a strike fighter squadron at California’s Naval Air Station Lemoore.

In the Navy, deactivation is different from decommissioning, and it is possible the VFA-101 Grim Reapers will be resurrected.

In fact, Thursday’s ceremony marked the third time that VFA-101 has been deactivated. Throughout its history, the squadron has consistently trained pilots in the most advanced aircraft of their day, including the F-4 Phantom and the F-14 Tomcat.

In the meantime, said Rear Adm. Roy J. Kelley, commander of Naval Air Force Atlantic, “the legacy (of VFA-101) will live on, and I have no doubt that one day we will see it in an operational capacity once again.”

Moving the Grim Reapers to NAS Lemoore is designed to consolidate the Navy’s F-35C operation, said Lt. Cdr. Lydia GiBock, public affairs officer for the Joint Strike Fighter Wing, as the Navy focuses on getting the fifth-generation fighter jet out to sea.

At Eglin, Kelley said, the Grim Reapers did “incredible work” that delivered “a game-changing capability” to the Navy. But he said consolidating Navy F-35 operations at NAS Lemoore will support the development of Navy F-35C squadrons and assist in the testing and evaluation of the carrier-variant fighter jet.

“This is the work you have been doing here is so important,” Kelley told the crowd of VFA-101 personnel and contractors gathered in a hangar at the departing squadron’s Eglin headquarters, in front of the last two Grim Reapers’ F-35Cs remaining at the base. The two aircraft left Eglin at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Also speaking Thursday was Navy Cmdr. Adan Covarrubias, commander of VFA-101.

After thanking Eglin personnel, particularly Col. Paul Moga, commander of the 33rd Fighter Wing, for their support during the Grim Reapers’ stay at Eglin, Covarrubias praised the personnel under his command, calling them “the finest group of sailors and Marines anyone could ever ask for. I thank you.”

Navy F-35C Lightning II to leave Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., on May 23. The F-35 squadron is set to be deactivated at Eglin Air Force Base and move to NAS Lemoore.

A soldier at Fort Riley, Kan., operates the Army’s prototype for a reconfigurable virtual trainer during an assessment in April. The Army is set to award contracts for simulated training software.

A sailor marshals the last Navy F-35C Lightning II to leave Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., on May 23. The F-35 squadron is set to be deactivated at Eglin Air Force Base and move to NAS Lemoore.
Trump: Abe, US president discuss Iran in lengthy talks

FROM FRONT PAGE

“All I know is there have been no nuclear tests, no ballistic missiles going out, no long-range missiles going out and I think that someday we'll have a deal,” Trump said, adding that he is in “no rush.”

Trump is correct that North Korea has not recently tested a long-range missile that could reach the U.S. But early this month, North Korea fired off a series of short-range missiles that alarmed U.S. allies in close proximity to the North, including Japan. The tests broke a pause in North Korea's ballistic missile launches that began in late 2017. Abe reiterated his previous statement that the tests were conducted in defiance of the U.N.

“This is violating the Security Council resolution,” Abe said, adding that, as North Korea's neighbor, Japan feels threatened.

“It is of great regret. But at the same time between Kim Jong Un and President Trump a certain new approach was taken and that is something that I pay tribute to.”

Earlier Monday, Trump said he backed Abe’s interest in leveraging his country's good relations with Iran to help broker a possible dialogue between the U.S. and its nemesis in the Middle East. Abe said he is willing to do whatever he can to help reduce escalating tensions between the U.S. and Iran.

Trump and Abe discussed the issue before Abe and Abe could visit Iran next month.

"Peace and stability of the Middle East is very important for Japan and the United States and also for the international community as a whole,” Abe said.

The leaders held hours of talks after the U.S. president — at Abe’s invitation — became the first world leader to meet Japan’s new emperor, Naruhito, who ascended to the throne May 1.

The meeting with Naruhito and his wife, Empress Masako, was preceded by a grand outdoor welcome ceremony at Japan’s Imperial Palace, where Trump walked solo across red carpets, reviewing Japanese troops as the guest of honor.

Trump’s official visit also included golf with Abe, presenting a trophy to a sumo wrestling champion and a black-tie banquet at the palace. The visit included hours of one-on-one time for Trump and Abe, who has been trying to remain on Trump's good side despite disagreements between them on trade and other issues.

Trump didn’t hold back at the news conference when he was asked about Biden, declaring himself “not a fan.”

“Kim Jong Un made a statement that Joe Biden is a low-I.Q. individual,” Trump said, adding that Kim probably based his assessment on Biden’s record and “I probably agree with him on that.”

U.S. officeholders usually avoid engaging in politics while on foreign soil, hewing to the adage that politics stops at the water's edge. But Trump’s sharp attack on Biden, through his declaration of agreement with Kim, set aside that longstanding norm.

Trump and Abe largely glossed over their difference on trade, despite the potentially crippling tariffs on foreign autos that Trump is threatening to impose on Japan and the European Union. Trump declared to say what Japan would have to do to avoid those tariffs, but complimented of an “unbelievably large” trade imbalance with the nation.

Still, he said he expects to reach trade deals at some point with both Japan and China, but wouldn’t rush it.

“I think we will have a deal with Japan. Likewise, I think we will have a deal with China sometime in the future,” he said. Trump has tried to pressure China by slapping tariffs on hundreds of billions of dollars of Chinese goods.

Trump and Chinese President Xi Jinping are expected to meet during a world leaders’ summit next month in Osaka, Japan.

FROM STARS AND STRIPES

Melania Trump quite a draw at museum

TOKYO — Melania Trump was perfectly cool Sunday at an air-conditioned interactive digital museum in Tokyo where she drew a purple fish and had it projected on a digital aquarium on the wall as she and her husband, Japanese first lady Akiie Abe, joined dozens of schoolchildren while their husbands played golf under the scorching sun.

Trump drew the fish for a girl named Julia, and wrote under it: “Julia, Best Wishes, Me-Abe, but one by one they came over to her, and then in groups.

“Nice to meet you. Can you show me what you drew?” Melan- ia Trump asked a boy with a name sticker on his chest saying “Aoi.”

He showed her a green turtle with yellow feet, which they projected on the wall and watched it move around.

Abe colored her turtle in pink, with three little red hearts on the back, and signed “Peace” as well as the new imperial era name “Reiwa” that started this month.

The two first ladies also toured other exhibits that included the crystal room and the lamp room where they stopped for photo opportunities.

Trump arrived Saturday in Tokyo with President Donald Trump for a four-day state visit that is largely ceremonial and aimed for deepening personal ties between the two leaders.

Trump and Abe played 16 holes at the Mobarra golf course outside Tokyo in a “cozy atmosphere,” Japan’s Foreign Ministry said.

First lady Melania Trump chats with children as she visits a digital art museum Sunday in Tokyo.
US strengthens forces in Mideast to counter Iran

BY SUSANNAH GEORGE AND LOLITA C. BALDOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. will send hundreds of additional troops and a dozen fighter jets to the Middle East in the coming weeks to counter what the Pentagon said is an escalating campaign by Iran to plan attacks against the U.S. and its interests in the region. And for the first time, Pentagon officials on Friday publicly blamed Iran and its proxies for recent tanker bombings near United Arab Emirates and a rocket attack in Iraq.

President Donald Trump told reporters Friday that the 1,500 troops would have a “mostly protective” role as part of a buildup that began this month in response to tensions with Iran as the administration hurled accusations of an imminent attack and abruptly deployed Navy warships to the region. The moves alarmed members of Congress, who demanded proof and details amid fears the U.S. was lurching toward open conflict with Iran.

Adding to the uncertainty, Trump alternated between tough talk toward Iran and a more conciliatory message, insisting he is open to negotiations with the Islamic Republic. On Friday, he seemed to downplay the prospect of conflict when he spoke at the White House.

“Right now, I don’t think Iran wants to fight and I certainly don’t think they want to fight with us,” he said.

In a related move, the Trump administration on Friday used an emergency legal loophole to move ahead with the sale of $7 billion in precision-guided munitions and other military engineers to beef up protection for forces. In addition, a battalion of four Patriot missile batteries that was scheduled to leave the Middle East has been ordered to stay.

The total number of troops involved is about 1,500, with roughly 600 included in the Patriot battalion. None of those troops will go to either Iraq or Syria.

“We are going to be sending a relatively small number of troops, mostly protective,” the president said at the White House before setting off on a trip to Japan. “Some very talented people are going to be going to the Middle East right now, and we’ll see what happens.”

Briefing reporters at the Pentagon, Vice Admiral Michael Gilday, the Joint Staff director, did not provide direct evidence to back up claims tying Iran to the attacks. He told reporters the conclusions were based on intelligence and evidence gathered in the region, and officials said they are trying to declassify some of the information so that it could be made public.

“The information was driven by intelligence,” Gilday said, adding that the U.S. continues to see intelligence suggesting that Iran is acting in planning attacks against the U.S. and partners in the region by the Revolutionary Guard and Iranian proxies in Yemen and Iraq.

When pressed for proof of Iran’s involvement, he said the mines used in the tanker attacks were attributed directly to the Revolutionary Guard and he said threats could be traced back to someone in Iran.

“I’m not reverse engineering this,” he said. “The Iranians have said publicly they were going to do things. We learn more through intelligence reporting. They have acted upon those threats and they’ve actually attacked.”

The announcement of additional forces was met with mixed reviews.

“The chairperson of the House Armed Services Committee, Democrat Adam Smith, of Washington, called the buildup “unsettling.”

The senior Republican on the committee, Mac Thornberry, of Texas, called it “a prudent step to protect our forces and deter Iran” and said requests from commanders should “never be subject to a partisan debate.”
Most 2020 Dems tiptoe past talk of impeachment

By ELANA SCHOR and JUANA SUMMERS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democratic leaders in Congress have argued that impeaching President Donald Trump is a political mistake as the 2020 election nears. Most of the candidates running to succeed him seem to agree, for now.

Fewer than one-third of the 23 Democrats vying for the nomination are issuing calls to start the impeachment process, citing evidence in special counsel Robert Mueller’s report they believe shows Trump obstructed justice. Most others, including leading contenders Joe Biden and Bernie Sanders, have found a way to hedge or search for middle ground, suggesting suggestions that could lead to impeachment or saying Trump’s conduct warrants impeachment but stopping short of any call for such a proceeding.

The candidates’ reluctance, even some congressional Democrats who are pushing their leaders in the direction, underscores the risky politics of investigating the president for “high crimes and misdemeanors.” Impeachment matters deeply to the party’s base but remains unpopular with most Americans.

White House hopefuls may win praise from liberal activists by pressing House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., for an impeachment proceeding, citing the Trump administration’s stalling of subpoenas and the withholding of evidence in special counsel Robert Mueller’s report, which showed “exactly how bad this president is and exactly who he’s surrounded himself with and how corrupt he really is.” Democrats and Republicans alike would “reject that kind of behavior.”

But then comes Nevada, where the first two states that will see the two states with the largest Hispanic populations go to the polls earlier than usual.

Hispanics make up just 6% of the population in Nevada, which holds caucuses Feb. 3, and barely half that percentage in New Hampshire, which goes next.

But then comes Nevada, where almost 30% of people are Hispanic. Just 10 days later this cycle, California and Texas — home to 13-plus million eligible Hispanic voters, nearly half of all such voters nationwide, according to the Pew Research Center — vote on “Super Tuesday.”

That means candidates who can win contested Hispanic support could potentially secure a viable — if narrow — path of survival through the primary’s frantic opening weeks, as the 23-candidate field winnows.

A total of 4,051 Democratic delegates are up for grabs. Nearly 50% of those will be in California and 26% plus in Texas. Both allocate delegates proportionately, though, meaning even the winners likely have to share their hauls — and potentially providing more lifelines for any candidates who can mobilize Hispanics even if they don’t finish first.

“I think it’s smart for the candidates to be thinking about how they can become a household name in the Latino community,” said Matt Barreto, co-founder of the Hispanic polling firm Latino Decisions. “It will keep them alive and it will make them a national contender, even if they don’t do well in Iowa or New Hampshire.”

It’s a risky strategy since that means betting on an electorate that’s disproportionately young and plagued by low voter turnout — and may still mostly be going to the polls late enough that campaigns working hard to woo it may not last that long.

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richard- son, who was the lone Hispanic in the 2008 presidential race, made a strong showing in Nevada especially to his bid, only to drop out before he got there following fourth-place finishes in Iowa and New Hampshire.

U.S. Census survey data shows that general election Hispanic turnout in 2018 climbed 13-plus percentage points from the last midterms in 2014, to 40.4%, but still trailed whites, who reported voting at 55% rates, and blacks, who reported voting at 51.1%.

Still, Barreto noted that the overall number of Hispanics who reported voting in recent cycles and that the turnout percentage has been hurt because so many Hispanics are turning 18, and young people of all backgrounds are less likely to vote.

2020 Democratic primary calendar may boost Hispanic voter clout

By WILL WEISSERT
Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — How to pronounce Beto O’Rourke’s first name — as in Be-Tay, or Be-Taw — is debated nearly everywhere the 2020 Democratic presidential hopeful goes in Iowa. But Rich Salas doesn’t hesitate.

“BEE-Tay!” — he says, correctly while introducing O’Rourke at a recent gathering of an Asian and Latino political action committee. “That’s a really great name.”

Salas noted that O’Rourke “speaks really good Spanish, better than I do,” before leading chants of “Viva Beto!”

It’s a rallying cry that may not resonate in Iowa, home to the nation’s first presidential nominating contest, but could pay dividends faster than in previous years thanks to a primary calendar that will see the two states with the largest Hispanic populations go to the polls earlier than usual.

Hispanics make up just 6% of the population in Iowa, which holds caucuses Feb. 3, and barely half that percentage in New Hampshire, which goes next.

But then comes Nevada, where almost 30% of people are Hispanic. Just 10 days later this cycle, California and Texas — home to 13-plus million eligible Hispanic voters, nearly half of all such voters nationwide, according to the Pew Research Center — vote on “Super Tuesday.”

That means candidates who can win contested Hispanic support could potentially secure a viable — if narrow — path of survival through the primary’s frantic opening weeks, as the 23-candidate field winnows.

A total of 4,051 Democratic delegates are up for grabs. Nearly 50% of those will be in California and 26% plus in Texas. Both allocate delegates proportionately, though, meaning even the winners likely have to share their hauls — and potentially providing more lifelines for any candidates who can mobilize Hispanics even if they don’t finish first.

“I think it’s smart for the candidates to be thinking about how they can become a household name in the Latino community,” said Matt Barreto, co-founder of the Hispanic polling firm Latino Decisions. “It will keep them alive and it will make them a national contender, even if they don’t do well in Iowa or New Hampshire.”

It’s a risky strategy since that means betting on an electorate that’s disproportionately young and plagued by low voter turnout — and may still mostly be going to the polls late enough that campaigns working hard to woo it may not last that long.

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson, who was the lone Hispanic in the 2008 presidential race, made a strong showing in Nevada especially to his bid, only to drop out before he got there following fourth-place finishes in Iowa and New Hampshire.

U.S. Census survey data shows that general election Hispanic turnout in 2018 climbed 13-plus percentage points from the last midterms in 2014, to 40.4%, but still trailed whites, who reported voting at 55% rates, and blacks, who reported voting at 51.1%.

Still, Barreto noted that the overall number of Hispanics who reported voting in recent cycles and that the turnout percentage has been hurt because so many Hispanics are turning 18, and young people of all backgrounds are less likely to vote.
Historic flooding predicted along Arkansas River

Associated Press

FORT SMITH, Ark. — Residents in parts of Arkansas were preparing for what meteorologists on Sunday predicted would be the worst flooding in recorded history along parts of the Arkansas River over the coming week.

The National Weather Service said in the statement that levee "overtopping" is likely with "significant impacts to life and property across a very large area."

The Arkansas River reached 38.2 feet on Sunday near Fort Smith, Ark., surpassing the historic crest of 38.1 feet in April 1945.

Spokeswoman Karen Santos said the city of 80,000 residents that’s on the border with Oklahoma was in “preparedness and warning mode.” She said one home was completely submerged and about 500 homes either have water very close or in them. Authorities predict hundreds more homes throughout the area.

Crossing, Ark., on Saturday for distribution around flood-prone system.

The National Weather Service said in the statement that levee "overtopping" is likely with "significant impacts to life and property across a very large area."

The Arkansas River reached 38.2 feet on Sunday near Fort Smith, Ark., surpassing the historic crest of 38.1 feet in April 1945.

Spokeswoman Karen Santos said the city of 80,000 residents that’s on the border with Oklahoma was in “preparedness and warning mode.” She said one home was completely submerged and about 500 homes either have water very close or in them. Authorities predict hundreds more homes throughout the area.

Across the river from Fort Smith, the tiny town of Moffett, Okla., population about 120, was submerged by Saturday afternoon, Sequoyah County Emergency Management Director Steve Rutherford told the Times Record on Sunday to consider leaving for higher ground because the river crested there Tuesday at 42.5 feet.

In downtown Van Buren, Ark., just northeast of Fort Smith, Rickey Jones, co-owner of Broken Joe’s Screen Printing, was among several business owners who put sandbags in front of their entrances.

“We’re going to be stacking sandbags as high as we can in here, taking out electronics and helping out our neighbors,” Jones said.

On Sunday afternoon, a National Guard helicopter was sent to rescue two Army Corps of Engineers workers who were trapped in a building as the Arkansas River rose, said Arkansas Department of Emergency Management spokeswoman Melody Daniel.

“The river had risen and spread to a point where the lock and dam building itself was no longer accessible by boat or road,” said Daniel, who took video of the rescue at the Trindle Lock and Dam, located on the county line of Crawford and Sebastian counties.

She said there were also several road closures due to high water.

The water flowing into the Arkansas River has come from rains in southeast Kansas and northeastern Oklahoma, said National Weather Service meteorologist Willie Gilmore.

“All that water funneled down into the tributaries that go into the Arkansas River,” Gilmore said.

In Tulsa, authorities advised residents of some neighborhoods on Sunday to consider leaving for higher ground because the river is stressing the city’s old levee system.

FROM FRONT PAGE

Saturday and lasted for four minutes. The tornado was about 75 yards wide at its widest point and was on the ground for 2.2 miles.

The tornado was spawned by a powerful storm system that rolled through the state — the latest in a week of violent storms to hit the flood-wary Plains and Midwest that have been blamed for at least 13 deaths, including the two killed in El Reno.

Early Sunday, another tornado destroyed several buildings and downed trees and power lines in the Tulsa suburb of Sapulpa, which is 110 miles northeast of El Reno. Pete Snyder, a hydro-meteorological technician with the weather service in Tulsa, said crews were assessing damage to determine the tornado’s rating.

The area also experienced damage from strong straight-line winds, he said.

The Sapulpa Police Department said on its Facebook page that it hadn’t heard of any deaths and that only a few minor injuries had been reported.

Residents wandered around after sunrise to survey the damage, carefully avoiding fallen utility poles that blocked some streets. Among the buildings that were destroyed was a historic railroad building built in the early 1900s that the Farmers Feed Store had been using for storage. A furniture store’s warehouse was also destroyed.

In El Reno, emergency crews sifted through the rubble at the trailer park and motel, where the second story collapsed into a pile of debris strewn about the first floor and parking lot.

Tweety Garrison, 63, told The Associated Press that she was in her mobile home with her husband, two young grandchildren and family friend when she heard the storm coming and immediately hit the ground. Moments later, she heard her neighbor’s mobile home slam into hers before it flipped over and landed on her roof.

Garrison said the incident lasted five to 10 minutes and that she received a tornado warning on her phone but the sirens didn’t go off until after the twister hit.

The storm is the latest to hit the flood-wary central U.S. and dumped yet more rain in the region’s already bloated waterways.

In Tulsa, authorities advised residents of some neighborhoods Sunday to consider leaving for higher ground because the Arkansas River is stressing the city’s old levee system.

Report: Texas would lose hundreds of billions in a major coastal storm

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Housing sales in Texas would drop, gasoline prices would increase and the state would lose hundreds of billions of dollars in economic output if another major storm struck an unprotected coastline, according to a new study.

The joint economic impact study by Texas A&M University at Galveston and the Texas General Land Office evaluated storm surge impacts on the three counties along Galveston Bay — Galveston, Harris and Chambers, the Houston Chronicle reported.

It also examines how flooding from a major storm would affect the local and national economies.

Hurricane Harvey swamped communities in the area in August 2017. The storm made landfall near Corpus Christi with 130 mph sustained winds and torrential rains.

Although a 500-year flood has a 0.2% — or one in 500 — chance of happening in any given year, Harvey was the third to hit the Houston area in three years. The study found that another such storm would result in an 8% decrease in Gross State Product by 2066, amounting to an $853 billion loss.

“This study clearly demonstrates that, without any new protections in place, future storm surges could have substantial and lingering impacts on Texas’ economy and send lasting ripples through other economic sectors nationwide,” Texas land commissioner George P. Bush said in a statement.

The study was conducted prior to the Army Corps of Engineers’ recommendation in October of a barrier proposal calling for 74 miles of dunes, gates, levees, and wildlife restoration. It would start at High Island and run the length of Bolivar Peninsula and Galveston.

With a barrier in place, economic losses would be considerably less, the study found.
Reversing Roe v. Wade wouldn’t turn clock back

BY DAVID CRARY
and CARLA K. JOHNSON
Associated Press

A wave of state abortion bans has set off speculation: What would happen if Roe v. Wade, the ruling establishing abortion rights nationwide, were overturned? Although far from a certainty, even with increased conservative clout on the Supreme Court, a reversal of Roe would mean abortion policy would revert to the states, and many would be eager to impose bans. What would not happen is a full-fledged turning back of the clock to 1973. Women now have far more methods to avoid unwanted pregnancies, as well as safer, easier options for abortion. Many abortions are induced at home with a pill and a drug combination, and advocacy groups are spreading the word about home abortions using one of the drugs that can be done without a medical professional’s involvement.

“I don’t think you can put all those different genie bottles in the bottle,” said medical historian Andrea Tone at McGill University in Montreal. “Women are in charge of their reproductive destiny. I don’t think women will put up with the absence of privacy and discretion that birth control and abortion provide.”

Here’s a look at some of the abortion-related changes that have unfolded since 1973:

Abortions increase, decline
At the time of Roe, abortion was broadly legal in four states, allowed under limited circumstances in 16 others, and outlawed in nearly all the rest. A reversal of Roe would produce a patchwork map where perhaps 15 or so states would continue to make abortion easily accessible, a dozen or more would ban virtually all abortions unless the mother’s life is at stake, and the rest would throw out their response in the public arena and the legislatures.

In 1974, a year after Roe, there were about 750,000 abortions in the U.S., according to the Guttmacher Institute, a research organization that supports abortion rights. The number of abortions rose steadily, peaking at 1.61 million in 1990. But then, starting a steady decline — falling to 926,200 in Guttmacher’s latest national survey, covering 2014. Close to 90 percent of the abortions occur in the first 12 weeks of pregnancy.

The decline is attributed to increased availability of effective contraception and a sharp decrease in unintended pregnancies, notably among teens. In 1974, teens accounted for 32% of abortions in the U.S.; in 2014 that dropped to 12%

Contraceptive options
Technology and science have given women unprecedented options and control over fertility since 1973. Back then, single women had only recently gained nationwide access to birth control, thanks to a 1972 Supreme Court ruling, said Dr. Sarah Prager, who directs the University of Washington School of Medicine’s family planning fellowship.

“This is recent history,” Prager said. “Now we have these incredibly effective contraceptive methods available.”

A woman can get the morning-after pill without a prescription and keep some in her medicine cabinet for emergencies. Her smartphone sends birth control reminders. Or, if she prefers, a matchstick-size implant gives her no-hassle contraception for years at a time.

Surgical abortion has become safer, employing tools that use vacuum pressure rather than scraping. There’s increasing use of the medication alternative: Ending a pregnancy with mifepristone and misoprostol now accounts for about 30% of U.S. abortions.

“It’s safe and comfortable,” said Missouri resident Lexi Moore, 30, who ended a pregnancy in September with a prescription from Planned Parenthood. “You get to sit in the comfort of your home instead of doing it in a clinic or in a back alley. … You will have cramps, like a heavy period. But it’s worth it in the end, and you have control over that.”

Moore had to drive 70 miles to pick up her prescription and, lacking insurance, paid $800 out of pocket. But she welcomed the outcome, and wrote thank-you cards to the clinic.

Her experience contrasts with that of Vikki Wachtel, who as an 18-year-old attending school in Connecticut had an abortion in New York City’s Bellevue Hos- pital in October 1970. That was just a few months after New York became a pioneer in broadly legalizing abortion.

“The staff made us feel like we were about to commit a crime,” Wachtel said, recalling how she and other young women were treated callously.

That ordeal was followed by post-abortion complications, yet Wachtel has steadfastly supported abortion rights.

“It was MY CHOICE to not have a child in 1970 and it must remain a woman’s choice to do so on a national level,” she said in an email. “These overreaching and restrictive laws will only make abortions more dangerous, not eliminate them.”

Abortion by mail
For women today, there’s even abortion by mail. It’s still under study, but early results show women can manage their medical abortions safely at home. A doctor first confirms the woman’s pregnancy is less than 10 weeks, then mails the pills. About 300 U.S. women have ended pregnancies in the TelAbortion study.

“Women are really grateful not to have to travel three or four hours to a clinic,” said researcher Dr. Beverly Winikoff, of Columbia University’s Mailman School of Public Health. “But there are also people within walking distance from a clinic who prefer to do it this way because it’s more private.”

To the extent that women can get and use misoprostol to terminate pregnancies at home, women even in states with bans would have a relatively safe option. It’s available only by prescription in the U.S. but is available online from some countries where it is sold over the counter.

Among the leading advocates of this do-it-yourself option is attorney Jill E. Adams, executive director of If/When/How: Law-yering for Reproductive Justice. Amid the wave of abortion bans, she said her group’s hotline has received a surge of calls from worried women.

“If the recent events have shown us anything, it’s that women’s managed abortion is vital to current and future reproductive rights in the United States,” Adams said.

Anti-abortion violence
In the aftermath of Roe, it took years for supporters and opponents of abortion rights to entrench themselves in the polarized camps of today. Anti-abortion violence didn’t erupt immediately after the decision, but it has been a constant since the 1990s, when three abortion providers and three clinic employ- ees were killed in attacks. More recently, Dr. George Tiller, an abortion provider in Wichita, Kan., was shot to death by an anti-abortion activist in 2009, and a gunman killed three people at a Planned Parent- hood clinic in Colorado in 2015.

There have been major shifts in anti-abortion tactics. Compared with the 1990s, there are fewer mass demon- strations and protests, and there is far more success passing anti-abortion laws in Republican-controlled state legislatures. In the past year, 22 states have passed sweeping ban-of-law other laws have been passed to restrict abortion access.

Julie Burkhart, a former colleague of Tiller’s who now runs a clinic in Wichita, said Kansas — like many GOP-controlled states — now has an array of restrictions that make abortions more expensive, time-consuming and stressful.

Michael New, an abortion opponent who teaches social research at Catholic University of America, said the debate is far more polarized now than in 1973, with fewer Republicans favoring abortion rights and fewer Democrats opposing them.

Pro-lifers are having an easier time en- acting pro-life laws in conservative parts of the country, but for the first time in a long time they have to play defense in blue states,” said New, citing bills passed in New York and Vermont this year expanding access to abortion.
Associated Press

WAILEKU, Hawaii—A Hawaii woman who was found alive in a forest on Maui island after going missing more than two weeks ago said she at times struggled not to give up.

Amanda Eller told The New York Times that despite these moments, she told herself “the only option I had was life or death.”

“I heard this voice that said, ‘If you want to live, keep going.’ And as soon as I would doubt my intuition and try to go another way than where it was telling me, something would stop me, a branch would fall on me, I’d stub my toe, or I’d trip,” said Eller, 35, a physical therapist and yoga instructor.

“So I was like, ‘OK, there is only one way to go.’”

Eller was found injured Friday in the Makawao Forest Reserve. Eller, who is from the Maui town of Haiku, went missing on May 8. Her white Toyota RAV4 was found in the forest parking lot with her phone and wallet inside.

Hundreds of volunteers searched for her. Eller’s parents offered a $10,000 reward to encourage people to find her.

Eller told the Times that she had intended to go on a short trail walk. She went off the path at one point to rest, and when she resumed hiking, she got turned around.

“I wanted to go back the way I’d come, but my gut was leading me another way — and I have a very strong gut instinct,” Eller said.

“So, I said, my car is this way and I’m just going to keep going until I reach it.”

She said she kept trying to get back to her car but wound up going deeper into the jungle. During her ordeal, she fell off a cliff, which led her to fracture her leg and tear the meniscus in her knee, a friend, Katie York, told the Times.

After the fall, she struggled to walk, Eller said. She also had trouble finding food.

“I was getting so skinny that I was really starting to doubt if I could survive,” Eller said.

Finally, after 17 days of wandering, she saw a helicopter that had been sent to find her.

“I looked up and they were right on top of me,” Eller told the Times. “I was like, ‘Oh my God,’ and I just broke down and started bawling.”

Javier Cantellops said he was searching for Eller from a helicopter along with Chris Berquist and Troy Helmers when they spotted her about 3:45 p.m. Friday near the Kailua reservoir, according to Maui Police Department spokesman Lt. Gregg Okamoto and the Honolulu Star-Advertiser.

“It was unbelievable, dude,” Cantellops said. “Seeing her for the first time in a long time was nothing short of elation.”

The Maui Fire Department took Eller to a hospital for evaluation, Okamoto said in a statement.

Her mother, Julia, told the Maui News that Amanda Eller survived by staying near a water source and eating wild raspberries and strawberry guavas. She even ate a couple of moths, Julia Eller said.

“Amanda Eller suffered a leg fracture, abrasions on her ankles and a severe sunburn, but Julia Eller told the Maui News that her daughter’s spirits were good. “And all of those things are treatable,” Julia Eller said.
States struggle with human trafficking cases

A sign is posted at Orchids of Asia Day Spa in Jupiter, Fla., on Feb. 19, one of several spas closed in south Florida after an investigation into sex trafficking. An Associated Press survey found many states lack the resources or the necessary laws to effectively fight human trafficking.

Some local officials point out that prosecutors do often win convictions on other, often lower charges that can still take suspected human traffickers off the street for a time, not unlike how murder charges are sometimes downgraded to manslaughter.

In the Florida prostitution case, many of the spa operators are being prosecuted under the state’s Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which calls for the maximum penalty — 30 years in prison, as for human trafficking.

That means prosecutors won’t have to rely on the testimony of trafficking victims, which is frequently difficult to procure, in order to build their cases while still being able to pursue long sentences, said Jeffrey Hendriks, a prosecutor in Fort Pierce handling six of the felony cases.

State attorneys general in Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and West Virginia told the AP they lack the authority to prosecute human trafficking cases, either because primary criminal prosecutorial powers lie with district and county attorneys or because state law doesn’t specifically allow them to prosecute the crimes.

State Sen. Mark Montigny, a Democrat from New Bedford who has proposed changes to increase the success rate, has suggested requiring the state to provide training programs for local law enforcement agencies; launch a human trafficking awareness and prevention campaign; compile an annual report of investigations and prosecutions statewide; and designate additional public money to trafficking survivor support services.

Hefty donation to Trump’s inaugural comes under scrutiny

Bradley Myles, executive director of the Polaris Project, which lobbied for passage of the state laws. “Prosecutors are still learning how to prosecute these cases successfully. We’re in the process of seeing the field mature more. It’s going to take time.”

A sign is posted at Orchids of Asia Day Spa in Jupiter, Fla., on Feb. 19, one of several spas closed in south Florida after an investigation into sex trafficking. An Associated Press survey found many states lack the resources or the necessary laws to effectively fight human trafficking.

Some local officials point out that prosecutors do often win convictions on other, often lower charges that can still take suspected human traffickers off the street for a time, not unlike how murder charges are sometimes downgraded to manslaughter.

In the Florida prostitution case, many of the spa operators are being prosecuted under the state’s Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which calls for the maximum penalty — 30 years in prison, as for human trafficking.

That means prosecutors won’t have to rely on the testimony of trafficking victims, which is frequently difficult to procure, in order to build their cases while still being able to pursue long sentences, said Jeffrey Hendriks, a prosecutor in Fort Pierce handling six of the felony cases.

State attorneys general in Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and West Virginia told the AP they lack the authority to prosecute human trafficking cases, either because primary criminal prosecutorial powers lie with district and county attorneys or because state law doesn’t specifically allow them to prosecute the crimes.

State Sen. Mark Montigny, a Democrat from New Bedford who has proposed changes to increase the success rate, has suggested requiring the state to provide training programs for local law enforcement agencies; launch a human trafficking awareness and prevention campaign; compile an annual report of investigations and prosecutions statewide; and designate additional public money to trafficking survivor support services.

Hefty donation to Trump’s inaugural comes under scrutiny

Bradley Myles, executive director of the Polaris Project, which lobbied for passage of the state laws. “Prosecutors are still learning how to prosecute these cases successfully. We’re in the process of seeing the field mature more. It’s going to take time.”

A sign is posted at Orchids of Asia Day Spa in Jupiter, Fla., on Feb. 19, one of several spas closed in south Florida after an investigation into sex trafficking. An Associated Press survey found many states lack the resources or the necessary laws to effectively fight human trafficking.

Some local officials point out that prosecutors do often win convictions on other, often lower charges that can still take suspected human traffickers off the street for a time, not unlike how murder charges are sometimes downgraded to manslaughter.

In the Florida prostitution case, many of the spa operators are being prosecuted under the state’s Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which calls for the maximum penalty — 30 years in prison, as for human trafficking.

That means prosecutors won’t have to rely on the testimony of trafficking victims, which is frequently difficult to procure, in order to build their cases while still being able to pursue long sentences, said Jeffrey Hendriks, a prosecutor in Fort Pierce handling six of the felony cases.

State attorneys general in Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and West Virginia told the AP they lack the authority to prosecute human trafficking cases, either because primary criminal prosecutorial powers lie with district and county attorneys or because state law doesn’t specifically allow them to prosecute the crimes.

State Sen. Mark Montigny, a Democrat from New Bedford who has proposed changes to increase the success rate, has suggested requiring the state to provide training programs for local law enforcement agencies; launch a human trafficking awareness and prevention campaign; compile an annual report of investigations and prosecutions statewide; and designate additional public money to trafficking survivor support services.

Hefty donation to Trump’s inaugural comes under scrutiny

Bradley Myles, executive director of the Polaris Project, which lobbied for passage of the state laws. “Prosecutors are still learning how to prosecute these cases successfully. We’re in the process of seeing the field mature more. It’s going to take time.”

A sign is posted at Orchids of Asia Day Spa in Jupiter, Fla., on Feb. 19, one of several spas closed in south Florida after an investigation into sex trafficking. An Associated Press survey found many states lack the resources or the necessary laws to effectively fight human trafficking.

Some local officials point out that prosecutors do often win convictions on other, often lower charges that can still take suspected human traffickers off the street for a time, not unlike how murder charges are sometimes downgraded to manslaughter.

In the Florida prostitution case, many of the spa operators are being prosecuted under the state’s Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which calls for the maximum penalty — 30 years in prison, as for human trafficking.

That means prosecutors won’t have to rely on the testimony of trafficking victims, which is frequently difficult to procure, in order to build their cases while still being able to pursue long sentences, said Jeffrey Hendriks, a prosecutor in Fort Pierce handling six of the felony cases.

State attorneys general in Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and West Virginia told the AP they lack the authority to prosecute human trafficking cases, either because primary criminal prosecutorial powers lie with district and county attorneys or because state law doesn’t specifically allow them to prosecute the crimes.

State Sen. Mark Montigny, a Democrat from New Bedford who has proposed changes to increase the success rate, has suggested requiring the state to provide training programs for local law enforcement agencies; launch a human trafficking awareness and prevention campaign; compile an annual report of investigations and prosecutions statewide; and designate additional public money to trafficking survivor support services.

Hefty donation to Trump’s inaugural comes under scrutiny

Bradley Myles, executive director of the Polaris Project, which lobbied for passage of the state laws. “Prosecutors are still learning how to prosecute these cases successfully. We’re in the process of seeing the field mature more. It’s going to take time.”

A sign is posted at Orchids of Asia Day Spa in Jupiter, Fla., on Feb. 19, one of several spas closed in south Florida after an investigation into sex trafficking. An Associated Press survey found many states lack the resources or the necessary laws to effectively fight human trafficking.

Some local officials point out that prosecutors do often win convictions on other, often lower charges that can still take suspected human traffickers off the street for a time, not unlike how murder charges are sometimes downgraded to manslaughter.

In the Florida prostitution case, many of the spa operators are being prosecuted under the state’s Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, which calls for the maximum penalty — 30 years in prison, as for human trafficking.

That means prosecutors won’t have to rely on the testimony of trafficking victims, which is frequently difficult to procure, in order to build their cases while still being able to pursue long sentences, said Jeffrey Hendriks, a prosecutor in Fort Pierce handling six of the felony cases.

State attorneys general in Connecticut, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, North Dakota, Tennessee, Washington and West Virginia told the AP they lack the authority to prosecute human trafficking cases, either because primary criminal prosecutorial powers lie with district and county attorneys or because state law doesn’t specifically allow them to prosecute the crimes.

State Sen. Mark Montigny, a Democrat from New Bedford who has proposed changes to increase the success rate, has suggested requiring the state to provide training programs for local law enforcement agencies; launch a human trafficking awareness and prevention campaign; compile an annual report of investigations and prosecutions statewide; and designate additional public money to trafficking survivor support services.
Refugees learn to swim as part of ministries project

By Massarah Mikati
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — Zainab Altameemi stood in the outdoor pool of the Trotter Family YMCA in west Houston on a recent Monday, donning a black burkini, a swimsuit that covers her hair and entire body.

The Houston Chronicle reported that Altameemi's swim instructor, Kirby Frank, was trying to get her to float on her back. A skeptical, hesitant look appeared on her face.

The Iraqi refugee has been taking swimming lessons since January, along with half a dozen other refugee women. For many of the women coming from more conservative societies in Iraq and Syria, this is one of the first times they’ve had the opportunity to learn to swim. But the classes, organized by Interfaith Ministries of Greater Houston volunteer Chloe Krane, mean more than learning a new skill.

Life in the water is easy, and going back to Iraq wasn’t an option.

“In Egypt, the day-to-day life was hard,” she said in Arabic. “Schools were expensive, cost of living was expensive and work was hard to find.”

Houston, where Altameemi came with her family as refugees in 2016, is the polar opposite. Schools are better, the opportunities for her three children — ages 11, 17 and 18 months — abound and there is support.

“She has so much fun; she can learn — even if you get older,” her kids enjoy swimming, she reconsidered.

“People are like, ‘What are you doing?” said the Mount Pleasant student. “I just want to learn. I feel joy.”

When Krane brought up her swimming lessons idea to the women in the empowerment group she heads, Altameemi thought, “No way.” But when she thought of the approaching summer season and how much her kids enjoy swimming, she reconsidered.

Plus, she said, “It’s something just for me. I like to learn. I feel joy.”

The group of women desperately clung to the wall of the pool as they stood in the shallow end during their first class. Panicked, each woman tried to encourage another one to let go of the wall in between nervous laughter.

Eventually, Badeel was the first one to let go — and she said it felt like the greatest achievement.

“It was so hard the first day, and then it was just an incredible feeling,” she recalled, beaming.

Fear, and subsequently courage, are not unfamiliar to Badeel, 36. She is from the Iraqi village of Bashiga, less than 20 miles north-west of Mosul. She and her family are Yazidis, the ethnoreligious minority that was persecuted by Islamic State.

“We didn’t plan to leave Iraq at all,” Badeel said. “We had a life there. My husband and I were teachers. We bought land and were planning to build a house.”

But then, ISIS took over Mosul in 2014 and was on its way to Bashiga’s large Yazidi population.

The situation was so dire, the women raped and taken as sex slaves, the children sacrificed or trained to be child soldiers.

It was a nightmare. For two weeks, Badeel and her husband didn’t sleep, patrolling their home to protect their children. They fled to Kurdistan in 2014 and came to the U.S. two years later. When she resettled in Houston in 2016, Badeel and her husband were depressed and hopeless.

But Badeel started to see it as a fresh start to build a safe, happy life for her family. And although she had fears, she was driven to overcome them.

There are other refugee women, Badeel said, who are too scared to even leave their homes — and they are shocked to see Badeel going out on her own.

When she’s in the water, the burdens are lifted off her shoulders and worries escape her mind.

“I don’t want my kids to be afraid of anything, whether it’s swimming or anything else,” Badeel said. “When kids see that we’re not afraid, they’re not even going to think of a reason to be scared.”

Badeel and Altameemi never thought to try to swim in Iraq.

“It’s not acceptable for women to go to the pool back in Iraq,” Badeel said. “Their place is in the house, whether or not they’re married.”

Going from a society where swimming is unacceptable for women to one where it’s normal, highlighted for Badeel and Altameemi the opportunities they have in the U.S.

They know that they’ll be able to achieve so much more. Badeel, for instance, is studying to revalidate her teaching certificate to teach elementary school. She has seven years of experience in Iraq.

Delaware man carves life-size wooden statues

By Ryan Cormier
Delaware News Journal

DELAWARE CITY, Del. — Beth O’Neal is well aware that her husband is storing bodies in his horse barn.

“I haven’t sold the people yet, but now they’re starting to pile up,” Delaware City Refinery worker James O’Neal, 31, said while walking across his sunny property with his wife. “Most of my neighbors don’t know what’s going on over here.”

Across a rolling green pasture at their rural Bridgeton, N.J., home, O’Neal opened the barn door to reveal the famous faces he’s collected.

There’s actor and former bodybuilder Arnold Schwarzenegger, boxers Muhammad Ali and Floyd Mayweather Jr. and MMA fighters Conor McGregor and Cria Cyborg.

Oh — and Sylvester Stallone was also in there, with such a smooth face it looks more molded than sculpted in wood.

There’s no need to call the police. All six are life-size statues carved from massive tree trunks — started with chainsaws — the result of an obsessive hobby for the Wilmington native.

While all his neighbors may not know what he’s up to in that horse barn, plenty of others do.

The Daily Mail, a British tabloid, featured his Schwarzenegger carving in a September article, giving him international exposure. The headline? “I’ll Be Bark!”

In 2015, he created an Instagram account for his work and has since gained an impressive 25,000 followers.

He can do almost anything with his hands, it seems. A glance across his three-acre property shows how he cleared out 160 trees to create a pasture for the horse and built patios, a parking area and more around the house. With plenty of wood on his hands, he began carving.

Without any previous experience or art background of any kind, he just jumped in and taught himself, with eye-popping results.

His oversized carvings started with a 4-foot gargoyles, sold to a woman in Florida for $12,000.

The size of the carving stunned his wife.

“I said, ‘Don’t people usually start with little birds whittling or something?’” she said. “It was as big as I am.”

His life-size statues started three years ago with McGregor, cut out of a maple tree O’Neal had cut down. It took about six months to complete, about 700 to 800 hours of work.

O’Neal didn’t own the right kind of tools when he started, so he went to Lowe’s and bought carpenter chisels.

“After about 100 hours, I realized I couldn’t get any further with those, so I went to a wood craft store and bought some real chisels,” said the Mount Pleasant High School graduate. “I just figured it out by doing it.”

Once his big cuts are complete with a chainsaw, he uses his backhoe to bring the trunk (now about 1,000 pounds) across his property from the woods through the horse pasture and into a horse barn. There, he turns that block of wood into an artistic marvel, usually weighing between 200 and 375 pounds when he’s done.

His next project is former bodybuilder Franco Columbu. A 3,000-pound hunk of pecs sits strapped up, ready to be cut. It’s the first piece of wood he’s had to buy so far, costing him $300.
UK Brexit Party scores big as Conservatives, Labour falter

BY JILL LAWLESS AND GREGORY KATZ
Associated Press

LONDON — Veteran euro skeptic Nigel Farage said Britain would get results from the European Union without a divorce deal after an election across the bloc saw his Brexit Party and pro-EU forces carve up the votes at the expense of the long-dominant larger parties.

The U.K.’s governing Conservative Party was all but wiped out, and Labour Party leader Jeremy Corbyn was set to lead the country into a political impasse and failing to lead it out of the EU.

With results announced Monday for all of England and Wales, the Brexit Party had won 28 of the 73 British EU seats up for grabs and almost a third of the vote.

The pro-EU Liberal Democrats took about 20% of the vote and 15 seats — up from one at the last EU election in 2014. Labour came in third with 10 seats, followed by the pro-European, environmentalist Greens, with seven. The ruling Conservatives were decimated, largely blamed by voters for failing to deliver Brexit in March as planned — in fifth place with just two seats out of the bloc’s 73.

Scotland and Northern Ireland are due to announce their results later.

The election leaves Britain’s EU exit ever more uncertain, with both Brexiters and pro-EU “remainers” able to claim strong support. Labour and the Conservatives, who in different ways each sought a compromise Brexit, were hammered.

The result raises the likelihood of a chaotic “no deal” exit from the EU — also known as a “Brexit back on the table,” Farage said.

A triumphant Farage said his party would “stun everybody” in the next British general election if the country didn’t leave the EU but united in anger at the two far-right and center-left parties and revealed the growing support Labour Party and for their embarrassing failure to manage the divided country’s delayed departure from the EU.

Riding what they called Europe’s “green wave” backed by pro-EU-wide rivals urging climate action, environmentalist parties made strong gains, notably in Germany, one of the continent’s main forces for EU integration.

Another mainstream formation, the pro-free-market ALDE group backed by Interior Minister Matteo Salvini, is set to become one of the biggest in the 28-nation bloc’s assembly. Belong’s Vlamins Belang also made significant gains.

“The rules are changing in Europe,” Salvini said at his League party headquarters in Milan early Monday. “A new Europe is born.”

Provisional results show the League would win 34% of the vote, up from just 6% at the last European election in 2014.

The lion’s share of Britain’s seats went to Nigel Farage’s Brexit Party as citizens punished the governing conservatives and opposition Labour Party for their embarrassing failure to manage the divided country’s delayed departure from the EU.

In Britain, the leaders of Germany’s gov-erning parties met separately to weigh the fallout from their worst post-World War II result, and even though we have a very small number of people who have won this election, our influence will be huge,” the former Dutch foreign minister said. “We have lost seats, and this means that we have to be humble.”

Spanish caretaker Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez was a notable exception, as his victorious Socialists looked set to win 20% of the vote and 15 seats — up from 2014’s 13% and 15 seats — under hard-line far-right National Front leader Marine Le Pen, who was trounced by Macron in national elections two years ago.

He was due to hold talks with the leaders of Spain, Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, Hungary, Poland and Slovakia ahead of the dinner summit in Brussels.

France wasn’t the only country where voters took their concerns about immigration and security to the ballot box. Italy’s populist League party, under hard-line Interior Minister Matteo Salvini, is set to become one of the biggest in the 28-nation bloc’s assembly.

But the two parties have dominated the parliament with a combined majority since elections were first held in 1979. Senior figures from the EPP hold the top posts in the EU’s three main institutions: parlia-ment president, head of the EU’s powerful executive commission and European Council president, who chairs summits of European presidents and prime ministers.

Ireland votes by large majority to loosen divorce law

LONDON — Irish voters have overwhelmingly endorsed a plan to liberalize the country’s constitution to make it easier for couples to divorce, election officials said Sunday.

Just over 82% of voters endorsed removing a requirement that couples be separated for four of the previous five years before they can divorce.

It will fall to Ireland’s Parliament to come up with new legislation to govern divorce. The country’s Fine Gael party-led government has proposed halving the separation period to two years.

Divorce was banned in the largely Roman Catholic country until 1995. Ireland has seen rapid social change in recent years. In 2015, the country voted to legalize same-sex marriage, and last year, voters opted by a 2-to-1 margin to end a constitutional ban on abortion.

Culture Minister Josepha Madigan told RTE News that voters had shown compassion by “humanizing the system.”

“I think it’s an emphatic, unequivocal result, and even though we have a very low marital breakdown in Ireland, it just demonstrates the amount of people who stand in solidarity with them,” she said.

Voter turnout in the referendum was just over 50%.

Results are still being tallied in Ireland’s local elections and a vote for seats in the European Parliament.
Available Now

STARS and STRIPES

Presents

FORCE FOR HIRE

A STARS AND STRIPES PODCAST

A new podcast from the unique perspective only Stars and Stripes can provide.

Join us as we examine the influence of private military contracting on today’s armed forces.

Explore the culture, history, myths and facts of the new reality of modern warfare.

Listen Now on and on Stripes.com/podcasts

Hosted by Michelle Harven and Air Force veteran Desmon Farris.
Chinese TV carries ‘Daily Show’ clip on Huawei 5G lead

BY CHRISTOPHER BODEEN
Associated Press

BELING — China has deployed an unlikely voice in its trade war with the U.S. Trevor Noah, host of Comedy Central’s “The Daily Show.”

A brief clip from the comedian’s “If You Don’t Know, Now You Know” segment on Chinese equipment maker Huawei’s dominance in next-generation 5G mobile technology ran on state broadcaster CCTV’s national lunchtime news Monday.

It was part of a barrage of stories and commentaries attacking the U.S. stance in the standoff between the world’s two largest economies.

Washington says Huawei, the leading supplier of telecom gear and No. 2 smartphone maker, is made by a Chinese company right now, the best 5G technology is Huawei’s, says the reason for the suppression of Huawei, “The CCTV host said. “He relentless suppression of Huawei,..”

Washington has ordered restrictions on U.S. technology sales to Huawei, subject to a 90-day grace period for Huawei smartphone owners and smaller U.S. telecoms providers that rely on its networking equipment, but only for existing hardware and software. The government said that grace period could be renewed.

In its broadcast Monday, CCTV also carried an interview with Huawei founder Ren Zhengfei, whose daughter, company CFO Meng Wanzhou, is under house arrest in Canada awaiting extradition hearings on U.S. fraud charges.

Huawei is prepared for an extended conflict, he said.

“This is likely to be a long-term battle. We are prepared for a long-term war; we don’t prepare for a short-term fight,” Ren said. “We fight a protracted war, and ... we might actually emerge stronger.”

Meng is accused of lying to banks about Huawei’s dealings with Iran to avoid U.S. trade sanctions. Ren said she was using her time in house arrest to study for a PhD and remains “very optimistic.”

U.S. officials say the sanctions are unrelated to the trade war with China, but many analysts see them as a way to pressure U.S. allies to abide by Washington’s entreaties to exclude Huawei equipment from next-generation 5G wireless networks.

Huawei Technologies relies on Google’s Android operating system and U.S. components suppliers for its smartphones, but Ren said last week that it has “supply backups” if it loses access to American components.

By Samuel Petrequin
Associated Press

PARIS — French police have arrested four suspects following a blast in the city of Lyon that wounded 13 people last week, authorities said Monday.

TV footage showed a police operation underway Monday in a small town outside Lyon involving officers wearing ski masks.

Police had launched a large manhunt after a device exploded Friday on a busy pedestrian street in France’s third-largest city.

Interior Minister Christophe Castaner announced the first arrest on Twitter, a development later confirmed by Paris prosecutors, who handle all terrorism-related cases.

The prosecutors’ office later said three other suspects, including a woman, were detained and formally arrested. According to French media, they included the mother and the brother of the main suspect.

Chasing the cheese

Participants take part in the third men’s downhill race during the annual cheese rolling competition at Cooper’s Hill in Brockworth, Gloucestershire, England, on Monday.

4 suspects arrested in Lyon blast

By FRANKLIN BRICENO
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — A powerful magnitude 8.0 earthquake that struck a remote part of the Amazon jungle in Peru early Sunday collapsed buildings and knocked out power to some areas but caused only one reported death.

The quake struck at 2:41 a.m. and was centered in a vast nature preserve 57 miles east of the small town of Yurimaguas. Helping limit damage was the earthquake’s depth, at 70 miles below the surface, according to the U.S. Geological Survey.

Earthquakes that are close to the surface generally cause more destruction.

Peru’s president surveys quake damage

President Martín Vizcarra called for calm before traveling to the zone with members of his Cabinet to survey the damage. He said first reports indicate a bridge had collapsed and several homes and roads had been affected.

“It’s a quake that was felt throughout the Peruvian jungle,” said Vizcarra.

Ricardo Seijas, chief of the National Emergency Operations Center, said one person died when a rock fell on a house in the Huarango district.

A preliminary survey by authorities found that six people were injured and 27 homes damaged across seven provinces. Three schools, three hospitals and two churches were also affected.

In Yurimaguas, a bridge and several old houses collapsed and the electricity was cut, according to the National Emergency Operations Center.

The quake also woke people in Lima, who ran out of their homes in fear.

“It was a really long quake,” said Maria Brito, who lives on the fifth floor of an apartment building in the capital. “It could’ve been worse, and luckily it’s over.”

Earthquakes are frequent in Peru, which lies on the Pacific’s so-called Ring of Fire. On August 15, 2007, a similarly sized quake struck near Lima, killing more than 500 people.

CONTRIBUTED PHOTO

By BEN BIRCHALL

The banks of the Huallaga River are cracked after a powerful earthquake in Puerto Santa Gema, on the outskirts of Yurimaguas, Peru, on Sunday.
New ‘smart glove’ aids recovery from stroke or an injury

By John Reid Blackwell
Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch

RICHMOND, Va. — As graduate students at the University of Virginia’s Darden School of Business, Scott Kim and Hoyoang Ban were brainstorming for inventive ideas.

One stuck and led to the start-up company Neofect. It had to do with using games to help people who have suffered loss of hand and arm function due to a stroke or injury regain some of their dexterity.

“The first thing that came to my mind was when I was growing up,” said Kim, who grew up in Seoul. “I was born with spina bifida. It was a mild case, but I had to have surgery and then I had to go through rehabilitation.”

The idea was to develop a “smart glove” that people recovering from a stroke or injury could wear which would be linked wirelessly to a computer with various games that would help them practice hand and arm motions.

“This idea struck us both as a good one,” Kim said. “It was one of the ideas we just kept talking about.”

That idea was the seed of Neofect, a company founded by Kim, Ban and a third friend.

Neofect now offers its smart-glove device as well as other tools such as its smart pegboard to help with hand and arm rehabilitation.

The company, which has offices in South Korea and San Francisco, recently set up a sales and order fulfillment office in Chesterfield County, its first East Coast location.

It took a long time for the start-up to get to this point. In 2010, the co-founders had little money to put into their project, Kim said. A $150,000 grant from the South Korean government helped with research and development, but it wasn’t enough to get a product to market.

For several years, the company got sidetracked on what it hoped would be a profitable venture in making smartphone games. Kim, who had worked in consulting before going to graduate school, planned to lead U.S. operations for Neofect but had to get another job to maintain his U.S. visa.

“There were many growth pains” for the startup business, Kim said.

Finally, by 2016, the company was able to move back to its original mission of making rehabilitation devices.

“One we did that, good things started happening,” Kim said.

“We wanted to make a device for home patients that is lightweight, portable and affordable,” he said. “This is still our mission.”

On a recent visit to the company’s office in the Boulders office park, Kim demonstrated the smart glove, a flexible exoskeleton-like device that slides onto the hand.

It is linked by Bluetooth to a computer tablet with a selection of 45 games the company designed that require various sorts of hand motions.

In a simple “squeeze the orange” game, the user must squeeze their fingers until an animated orange that appears on screen empties its juice into a glass. A game of blackjack lets the user practice hand motions that involve turning the wrist as playing cards flip on screen.

The goal is to make the repetitive motions of rehabilitation more interesting with a clear objective in mind.

The company’s software can track progress.

Neofect is offering its smart-glove device to both rehabilitation clinics as well as individuals who want to use it at home. The cost is $99 per month on a 24-month installment plan.

Nearly 795,000 people in the U.S. suffer strokes each year. Kim said he hopes the Neofect tool can become one way to provide better home rehabilitation.

EXCHANGE RATES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Currency</th>
<th>Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>British pound</td>
<td>$1.30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Japanese yen (May 27)</td>
<td>107.60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>South Korean won</td>
<td>1,160.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

INTEREST RATES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rate Description</th>
<th>Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Prime rate</td>
<td>5.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Discount rate</td>
<td>3.60</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Federal fund discount</td>
<td>2.10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30-year bond</td>
<td>2.75</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The weather is provided by the American Forces Network Weather Center, 2nd Weather Squadron at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb.
THE CENSUS

CT — GROTON — A Connecticut high school's prom had to be cut short when several students were taken to the hospital because of what was described as an irritant similar to pepper spray in the air.

Police said rescue crews responded to the Mystic Marriott Hotel in Grotton about 9:45 p.m. Saturday when several Stoneington High School students reported difficulty breathing.

The Day reported that Principal Mark Friese said in an email to parents Sunday morning that three students were taken by ambulance to the hospital, where they were treated and released “and appeared fine when they went home.”

City may ban sale of miniature liquor bottles

NM — ALBUQUERQUE — A northwestern New Mexico city is examining if it can ban the sale of miniature liquor bottles littering the grounds across town.

The Farmington Daily Times reported that Farmington Mayor Nate Duckett recently asked City Attorney Jennifer Breakell to investigate if the city could pass an ordinance banning the small liquor bottles.

Duckett made the request during the May 14 City Council meeting. That request came after a Farmington resident showed up at a City Council meeting with a bag full of miniature liquor bottles he had picked up while walking near Ladera Elementary School.

New Mexico Petroleum Marketers Association state executive Ruben Baca said banning miniature liquor bottles from being sold would likely be a hard battle for the city to win.

Man faces charges for defacing vet memorial

MA — BOSTON — Police said they took a man into custody for vandalizing a memorial to Vietnam War veterans in Boston ahead of the Memorial Day holiday.

State police and University of Massachusetts-Boston police identified a 33-year-old man from Dorchester as the suspect. Police said he was interviewed Saturday, then sent to a local hospital for a mental health evaluation and treatment.

His name wasn’t publicly released. Police said he’ll be charged with malicious destruction of property and tagging.

Volunteers cleaned up the swastikas and other graffiti that were scrawled on the memorial at the UMass-Boston campus sometime Thursday. They said 4:45 a.m. American flags and plants that adorned it.

Burglary suspect found living in a treehouse

CA — POMONA — Police pursuing a burglary suspect in a Southern California suburb found him living in an elaborate treehouse hidden on a hillside.

The Pomona Police Department said a tipster reported on May 21 that someone was living in the treehouse. Officers in a helicopter used heat-sensing equipment to locate Mark Duda, 56, in what police described as “a very well built and modern” treehouse.

Duda climbed down the tree and was arrested on suspicion of burglarizing a house last month.

Police said the treehouse was equipped with a fire pit, barbecue and lighting. It also looked out to the mountains in the distance.

Underwater art museum

Divers hang a large photo illustration on the superstructure of the 523-foot-long Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg that was intentionally sunk almost 10 years ago off Key West, Fla., in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary. The artwork, one of 24 created by Austrian photographic artist Andreas Franke, is part of his “Plastic Ocean Project” designed to communicate the need to protect the world’s oceans from plastic refuse. The entire series is to be on display on the former U.S. Air Force missile tracking ship for divers to view until Aug. 25.

THE CENSUS

NY — NEW YORK — Police have made an arrest in a mystery that’s been stopping New Yorkers in their tracks for months: a wave of subway train brakes grinding to a halt because someone — or something — had pulled the emergency brake. Isaiah Thompson, 23, of Brooklyn, was arrested late Thursday after police publicized video of a man they say pulled the emergency brake on a train in Manhattan during the May 21 evening rush hour. Thompson is also accused of committing a lewd act on the subway.

Police are investigating whether he’s behind about 40 other brake-pulling incidents that have cascaded into hundreds of delayed trains — and thousands of frustrated commuters — since February.

Underwater art museum

Divers hang a large photo illustration on the superstructure of the 523-foot-long Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg that was intentionally sunk almost 10 years ago off Key West, Fla., in the Florida Keys National Marine Sanctuary. The artwork, one of 24 created by Austrian photographic artist Andreas Franke, is part of his “Plastic Ocean Project” designed to communicate the need to protect the world’s oceans from plastic refuse. The entire series is to be on display on the former U.S. Air Force missile tracking ship for divers to view until Aug. 25.

2 die trying to jump car over open drawbridge

TX — LAKE CHARLES — Two Texas men are dead after trying to jump a compact car across the gap on a raised drawbridge.

Louisiana State Police said the incident happened shortly after 2 a.m. Friday at the Black Bayou Bridge about 6 miles south of Lake Charles. Investigators said the bridge was closed to traffic to let a boat pass through on the Intracoastal Waterway.

Witnesses said the car’s passenger pushed the gate arm up and they drove the 2016 Chevrolet Cruze up to the raised section. They backed up, then accelerated forward, trying to jump to the other side. The vehicle landed in the water and sank.

State police said Alejandro Cazares, 25, of McAllen, and Roberto Alejandro Moreno, 32, of Edinburg, were pronounced dead at the scene.
Korean director wins Cannes’ top film prize

Associated Press

South Korean director Bong Joon-ho’s raucous social satire “Parasite,” about a poor family of hustlers who find jobs with a wealthy family, won the Cannes Film Festival’s top award, the Palme d’Or, on May 25.

The win for “Parasite” marks the first Korean film to ever win the Palme. In the festival’s closing ceremony, jury president Alejandro Inarritu said the choice had been “unanimous” for the nine-person jury.

The genre-mixing film, Bong’s seventh, had arguably been celebrated more than others at Cannes this year, hailed by critics as the best yet from the 49-year-old director of “Snowpiercer” and “Okja.”

It was the second straight Palme victory for an Asian director. Last year, the award went to Japanese filmmaker Hirokazu Kore-eda’s “Shoplifters,” also a compassionate parable about an impoverished family.

Many of this year’s awards were given to social and political stories that depicted geopolitical dramas in localized tales, from African shores to Paris suburbs.

The festival’s second place award, the Grand Prize, went to French-Senegalese director Mati Diop’s feature-film debut, “Atlantics.” The film by Diop, the first black female director ever in competition at Cannes, says, to “ugly people, misfits and outcasts.”

Fanning: ‘I learned so much’

Elle Fanning, the youngest juror ever at Cannes, said she’s been transformed by her experience at the French festival.

“It’s very true, I feel like I’ve really learned.”

Mexican director Alejandro Inarritu, president of the jury, praised Fanning for bringing a younger perspective to the jury.

“Having Elle in the jury was a gift,” said Inarritu. “Elle is an old soul in a way. She has been doing films forever. But to have the fresh ideas, it really grounded us.”

“We saw it through her young eyes,” he added. “We learned a lot from her too.”

Sonic the Hedgehog delayed for redesign

The makers of “Sonic the Hedgehog” are slowing things down.

The film’s release date has been moved back three months after director Jeff Fowler announced a redesign was coming.

“Taking a little more time to make Sonic just right,” Fowler shared May 24 on Twitter.

The live-action and computer-generated movie will now open on Feb. 14. A new trailer was released, revealing a redesigned character that be cute?

inclusion of Natalie in ‘Then It Fell Apart’ are very valid,” Moby wrote on Instagram.

“I also fully recognize that it was truly imconsiderate of me not to let her know about her inclusion in the book beforehand, and equally imconsiderate for me to not fully respect her reaction.”

Moby’s claims were rebutted by Portman herself after the release of Moby’s new memoir. Moby pushed back at her denials, even posting a shirtless photo of himself with his arm around Portman as proof, for several days before finally posting her apology.

In an interview, Portman characterized their brief friendship as “creepy.”

Moby is nearly 16 years older than Portman.

To be clear, that’s a compliment.

Sedaris, 58, has been happy to play the oddball since she first gained a following with the cult comedies “Exit 57” and “Strangers with Candy.” In the latter, which marked its 20th anniversary last month, she starred as Jerri Blank, a 46-year-old who goes back to high school after decades as a “boozier, user and loser.”

The show aired for three seasons on Comedy Central.

Since then she’s played supporting roles in “Sex and the City,” “Unbreakable Kimmy Schmidt” and “BoJack Horseman”; popped up in the humorous essays written by her brother, bestselling author David Sedaris; and become one of late-night TV’s favorite go-to guests.

In “At Home,” Sedaris plays a version of herself, the chipper host of a homemaking show set in a bright vintage kitchen, as well as a number of eccentric supporting players.

“In an era when TV is flooded with topical humor, “At Home” stands out for its utter lack of contemporary references — there’s no Trump, no social media, no cellphones, lending the show a refreshingly apolitical vibe.

Sedaris says she’s not interested in being super famous.

“I’d rather be a little bit under the radar,” says Sedaris, who likes that “At Home” airs on TruTV. “You have to really find it. I like the audience that’s willing to do that. They’re more loyal and dedicated.”
By G. Chambers Williams III
Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram

N ow in its second generation, the seven-passenger Lexus GX 460 full-size sport utility returns for 2019 with a starting price of $52,355 (plus $1,025 freight) for the base model, $54,925 for the midlevel Premium and $63,755 for the top-of-the-line Luxury version, which we tested for this report.

For 2019, the GX carries over without any major changes, but the Blind Spot Monitor with Rear Cross-Traffic Alert is now a standard feature at no extra cost.

Also, the Lexus Enform Safety Connect and Service Connect features are complimentary for 10 years, and Lexus Enform Remote, which brings smart-watch and Amazon Alexa integration, is now included on all models.

Over the past couple of years there have been some content tweaks, such as the addition of a new Sport Design Package ($1,950) for the two higher trim levels, which adds 18-inch split-five-spoke alloy wheels with gunmetal metallic finish; special front fascia and lower grille surround; side mirrors with chrome detail; a sporty rear valence; chrome exhaust tip; scarlet tire t Diplomatic heads, LED fog lights, intuitive parking assist, heated/ventilated front bucket seats, heated outboard second-row seats, three-zone automatic climate control, touch-screen navigation with voice control, and the Lexus Enform telematics/connectivity system with app suite and destination assist.

Additional features on the Luxury model include the Adaptive Variable Suspension, self-leveling rear air suspension, semi-aniline leather interior trim, wood- and leather-trimmed heated steering wheel, power-reclining and folding third-row seats, headlight washers and a cargo-area cover.

The included Lexus Enform Service Connect allows owners to have remote access to information about the vehicle. The available information includes maintenance alerts, warning-light notifications, and vehicle health reports that include email and push notifications for diagnostic information, required maintenance reminders, current vehicle alerts, service campaigns and more.

Also available is Lexus Enform Remote, which allows the owner to remotely view and control certain vehicle features using a mobile app for iOS and Android devices. Key features include remote door lock/unlock, remote stop/start for the engine and climate control, vehicle finder, guest driver monitor and more.

On all models, there’s a standard audio system with eight-inch touch-screen display, backup camera system, and HD radio with real-time traffic and weather information. Trailer sway control is also standard.

Previously known as the GX 470, since 2010 the vehicle has been called the GX 460, reflecting a change for the second generation to a 4.6-liter V-8 engine, replacing the previous 4.7-liter.

Among Lexus vehicles, this is one of two traditional sport utilities. The other is the slightly more expensive LX 570. The GX essentially is a fancier version of the Toyota 4Runner, while the LX is a higher-end version of the Toyota Land Cruiser.

Under the hood of the GX is the 4.6-liter V-8 rated at 301 horsepower and 329 foot-pounds of torque, connected to a six-speed automatic transmission.

With the standard bench seat, the GX has room for three passengers in the middle row; the third row can accommodate two small people (think kids). The second-row bench can be moved up to 4.1 inches forward or backward to allow for longer or shorter legs in either row, or to maximize cargo space behind the second seat (with the third seat folded).

The 60/40 split second-row seat can be folded, as well, to increase cargo space, and it also can recline. The third seat has a standard power folding feature to increase cargo capacity when the seat isn’t needed for passengers — otherwise, space is quite limited behind the third row — under 10 cubic feet.

On the GX, the tailgate opens to the right side in one piece, or the glass can be flipped up separately with the rest of the tailgate still in place.

The GX is very quiet at highway speeds, allowing passengers to enjoy the entertainment system or conduct conversations in normal voices.

Standard safety features include electronic stability control; antilock brakes with electronic brake-force distribution and brake assist; and 10 air bags, including driver and front-passenger knee and seat-mounted side air bags as well roof-mounted side-curtain air bags for all three rows.

Among other standard GX 460 features are eight-way power-adjustable front seats; automatic climate control; steering wheel audio controls; power moon roof; a memory system for the driver’s seat, steering wheel position and outside mirrors; and an overhead console with universal garage opener.

2019 Lexus GX 460

Highlights: This vehicle offers truck ruggedness and reliability in a package that combines great off-road capability with good on-road ride and handling.

Negatives: Third seat is not roomy enough for full-size adults.

Base price: $52,355-$63,755, plus $1,025 freight.

Price as tested: $70,840, including freight and options (2019 Luxury model).

Engine: 4.6-liter V-8.

Transmission: Six-speed automatic.

Power/torque: 301 horsepower/329 foot-pounds.

EPA fuel economy: 15 mpg city/18 highway/16 combined.

Cruise Control, Intelligent High-Beam Headlights, Curtain Control, and Wide View Front and Side Monitor.

The Driver Attention Monitor: uses a camera to scan the driver’s face, and to sound a warning if the driver stops looking forward. If the driver doesn’t respond as the vehicle closes on an obstacle detected ahead, this system gently applies the brakes, retracts the front seatbelts and prepares the brake system to respond with increased force when the brake pedal is pushed.

Premium models are created by adding the Premium Package to the base GX, bringing leather seats, mahogany wood interior trim, rain-sensing wipers with windshield de-icer, 18-inch split-spoke alloy wheels, LED fog lights, intuitive parking assist, heated/ventilated front bucket seats, heated outboard second-row seats, three-zone automatic climate control, touch-screen navigation with voice control, and the Lexus Enform telematics/connectivity system with app suite and destination assist.

There’s also an available Driver Support Package with Mark Levinson Audio ($2,340), included on our Luxury tester, which adds high-tech safety gear such as the Pre-Collision System, Driver Attention Monitor, Lane Departure Alert, Radar Cruise Control, Intelligent High-Beam Headlights, Curtain Control, and Wide View Front and Side Monitor.

With the standard bench seat, the GX has room for three passengers in the middle row; the third row can accommodate two small people (think kids). The second-row bench can be moved up to 4.1 inches forward or backward to allow for longer or shorter legs in either row, or to maximize cargo space behind the second seat (with the third seat folded).

The 60/40 split second-row seat can be folded, as well, to increase cargo space, and it also can recline. The third seat has a standard power folding feature to increase cargo capacity when the seat isn’t needed for passengers — otherwise, space is quite limited behind the third row — under 10 cubic feet.

On the GX, the tailgate opens to the right side in one piece, or the glass can be flipped up separately with the rest of the tailgate still in place.

The GX is very quiet at highway speeds, allowing passengers to enjoy the entertainment system or conduct conversations in normal voices.

Standard safety features include electronic stability control; antilock brakes with electronic brake-force distribution and brake assist; and 10 air bags, including driver and front-passenger knee and seat-mounted side air bags as well roof-mounted side-curtain air bags for all three rows.

Among other standard GX 460 features are eight-way power-adjustable front seats; automatic climate control; steering wheel audio controls; power moon roof; a memory system for the driver’s seat, steering wheel position and outside mirrors; and an overhead console with universal garage opener.
VEHICLE SHIPPING SERVICES

- International Shipping
- Import & Export
- Inland Trucking (U.S. & Europe)
- Door to door pick-up/delivery service
- Customs clearance
- All Risk Marine insurance
- Auto insurance (Germany only)

For Further Information Please Contact

GERMANY
Phone: +49-164519-2592730
Toll-Free: 0800-CARSHIP (Germany only)
E-Mail: info@transglobal-logistics.de
WEB: www.transglobal-logistics.de

UNITED KINGDOM
Phone: +44-(0)1638-515714
Toll-Free: 0800-054-8187 (US only)
E-Mail: enquiries@carshipuk.co.uk
WEB: www.carshipuk.co.uk

For 2nd POV Shipments - Offices/Agencies near Military Installations

Transportation 944

Ship Cars and Containers to and from the USA

Opening Hours: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mon - Fri
0800-522-427 or 800-WSA-SHIP (972-7447)

For a free rate request, please email info@worldwide-ship.de
Visit our Website www.worldwide-ship.de

---

Round-the-world news for America’s military.

Stripes.com supplies constant updates, on news of interest — including reports from our overseas military bases in Europe, Pacific, Southwest Asia and the Mideast, and coverage of the Pentagon and Capitol Hill.

Also available on mobile apps for Android smartphones and as an iOS app for both iPhone and iPad.
It's hard to take impeachment seriously now

By Noah Feldman

Bloomberg Opinion

Impeachment has jumped the shark. The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible. To be clear, impeachment itself and has long been a matter of high seriousness. Not so long ago, Richard Nixon resigned from the presidency amidst an affair as historic disgrace of being impeached. President Bill Clinton fought it out, famously. But neither of these cases addled anyone to doubt that his impeachment, however motivated by partisanship, became a permanent stain on his personal and presidential legacy. Where once impeachment was a preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment is intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible. To be clear, impeachment itself and has long been a matter of high seriousness. Not so long ago, Richard Nixon resigned from the presidency amidst an affair as historic disgrace of being impeached. President Bill Clinton fought it out, famously. But neither of these cases addled anyone to doubt that his impeachment, however motivated by partisanship, became a permanent stain on his personal and presidential legacy. Where once impeachment was a preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment is intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.

The episode that proves it is one in which serious, informed politicians are warning President Donald Trump actually wants to be impeached for political advantage and is trying to goad Democrats into obliging him. It would be tempting to imagine a more preposterous scenario under the Constitution and in the history of the presidency. Impeachment was intended by the constitutional framers as a highly serious option reserved for only the most extraordinary, egregious violations of the rule of law. Today’s impeachment is a trivialized gambit within the ordinary game of electoral politics. The undermining of the constitutional ideal is near-total. It’s almost incomprehensible.
Looking at the news
A weekly sampling of U.S. editorial cartoons

I've had it up to here with this personal finances nonsense.

LISA BENSON/Washington Post Writers Group

War Drums

LISA BENSON/Washington Post Writers Group

I don't do cover-up.

JACK OHMAN/Washington Post Writers Group

Manafort, Flynn, Stormy, Obstruction, Deutschebank

LISA BENSON/Washington Post Writers Group

Honor our heroes

LISA BENSON/Washington Post Writers Group

Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. —Ronald Reagan
Round-the-world news for America’s military.

Stripes.com supplies constant updates, on news of interest — including reports from our overseas military bases in Europe, Pacific, Southwest Asia and the Mideast, and coverage of the Pentagon and Capitol Hill. Also available on mobile apps for Android smartphones and as an iOS app for both iPhone and iPad.
Soccer

MLS Eastern Conference

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Team</th>
<th>W</th>
<th>L</th>
<th>T</th>
<th>Pts</th>
<th>GF</th>
<th>GA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>New York City FC</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>19</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Montreal Impact</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado Rapids</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>FC Dallas</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota United</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>21</td>
<td>21</td>
<td>18</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LA Galaxy</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>25</td>
<td>19</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Toronto FC</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>23</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Yellow Cards

- Manfredo, 15, 23rd.
- Russetti from Round RPL.

Soccer

A Yellow Cards

- Walker, 23rd.
- Russetti from Round RPL.

FC Dallas

Second half

- 2; coin flip determines home team for Game 3.

Los Angeles FC vs. LA Galaxy

Second half

- 2; coin flip determines home team for Game 3.

Soccer

A Yellow Cards

- Walker, 23rd.
- Russetti from Round RPL.
Ex-Blues rooting for first Cup win

BY STEPHEN WHYNO
Associated Press

BOSTON — T.J. Oshie went through five early playoff exits with the St. Louis Blues who could never seem to break through.

Four years after being traded, the Capitals winger hopes the Blues winning the Stanley Cup will ease their pain.

“They put in a lot of hard work,” said Oshie, who won the Cup with Washington last year. “They’ve had a lot of heartbreak. ... For that fan base and a lot of the staff that took care of me for seven years and some players that are still there that I’ve had and have a close bond with, I’d love to see them win.”

Oshie and plenty of other former members of the Blues organization are rooting for their old team to win the Cup for the first time in franchise history. That includes a couple of executives who helped build the team and are reuniting with pride at St. Louis living up to the potential that it appeared to have over this run of eight playoff appearances in 11 seasons.

“It’s just a good thing,” former Blues president of hockey operations John Davidson said. “That city deserves this. It’s a great sports city. There’s a lot of tradition behind their hockey club. ... I’m happy for them.”

St. Louis is the NHL’s oldest franchise that hasn’t won the Cup, and only the Toronto Maple Leafs’ drought since 1967 (months before the Blues’ inaugural season) is longer. Scotty Bowman, the Blues’ coach for consecutive trips to the final in 1968, 1969 and 1970, still feels a connection because his wife is from nearby Southern Illinois. He met her in St. Louis and has a history with assistant Larry Robinson and others in the organization.

Bowman is decades removed from his time with the Blues. Martin Brodeur was assistant general manager the past three seasons and before that was a special assistant to GM Doug Armstrong and finished his career in St. Louis.

Brodeur still lives in St. Louis while working for the New Jersey Devils because his 9-year-old son is in school and youth hockey there. He won’t go so far as to attend the games, but is looking forward to the city getting swept up in Stanley Cup frenzy.

“This city, it’s been crazy for this for a long time — obviously for 49 years, I guess,” Brodeur said. “Regardless of the people I worked with that they were tremendous to me and it was a big learning curve for me, it really helped me out in that department, but for the people that live in St. Louis and it’s a great sports town and they care about their Blues — it’s been a great run for them. I’m really happy for them.”

Davidson, who was with St. Louis from 2006-2012 and is now president of the New York Rangers, is happy for longtime Blues GM Larry Pleau, who has been with the club since 1997 and is now a senior adviser. Davidson also appreciates how Blues owner Tom Bihn and Pleau had a major hand in piecing together this core.

This was the success Davidson envisioned when the Blues drafted Alex Pietrangelo fourth overall in 2008.

“Alex never imagined it would happen with Jordan Binnington in goal, going so far as to say, ‘I don’t think the Blues knew he was going to be this good, but God bless him, he’s good.’”

Capitals backup goalie Pheonix Copley knew how good Binnington was from their time together with the Blues’ top minor league affiliate. Copley was the third goalie on Washington’s Olympic team last year and is thrilled to see his friend reach the final.

“He was a really good teammate and he’s a great guy. It’s always good to see guys who have put in the work and deserve to be getting the opportunities and deserve to be getting the success he’s having,” Copley said. “When you have a relationship with a guy, you always kind of root for him. That would be really cool, but it’s cool to watch him with all the success he’s having. He’s put in the work.”

Now that Oshie and Copley have championship rings of their own and the Capitals are out of the playoffs, they’re rooting for the Blues to finish the job against the Boston Bruins.

“It would be special with their story with how they struggled earlier in the year and how they came together,” Oshie said. “It would be a pretty cool story for them.”

Stanley Cup Final

Bruins’ Cassidy or Blues’ Berube will get Cup in second coaching try

BY STEPHEN WHYNO
Associated Press

Bruins coach Bruce Cassidy has guided Boston to the Stanley Cup Final a decade ago and a half after a disastrous tenure in Washington.

On the rebound

Bruins’ Cassidy or Blues’ Berube will get Cup in second coaching try

BY STEPHEN WHYNO
Associated Press

Bruins coach Bruce Cassidy has come a long way from writing his first NHL practice plan on a napkin.

Craig Berube hasn’t changed a bit from the moment he was fired from his first NHL head coaching job.

Two roads diverged in a crazy world of hockey and brought them to this Stanley Cup Final. Cassidy has guided the Boston Bruins to this point a decade and a half after a disastrous tenure in Washington. Berube took the St. Louis Blues from worst to first in their first final since 1970 several years after a short stint in Philadelphia.

One of them will become the sixth coach in 12 years to lift the Cup in his second stop as NHL head coach and reward an organization and countless people for giving him another chance.

“The guys that are good in this business, they learn a lot along the way and just continue to improve,” said Vegas general manager George McPhee, who hired Cassidy with Washington in 2002, had Berube as a player and then interviewed him for the Capitals’ coaching job in 2013.

In some ways it’s a shame that these guys didn’t get opportunities earlier because they’re good at it and they get opportunities at the American (Hockey) League and then get opportunities at the NHL. Cassidy’s former Capitals players couldn’t be sure he deserved this after benching respected veteran defenseman Calle Johansson in his last game with the team in 2003. Goaltender Olie Kolzig said Cassidy had “a lack of professionalism on and off the ice” at the time, ultimately led to his firing 25 games into his second season.

Cassidy’s former Capitals players couldn’t be sure he deserved this after benching respected veteran defenseman Calle Johansson in his last game with the team in 2003. Goaltender Olie Kolzig said Cassidy had “a lack of professionalism on and off the ice” at the time, ultimately led to his firing 25 games into his second season.

Cassidy’s former Capitals players couldn’t be sure he deserved this after benching respected veteran defenseman Calle Johansson in his last game with the team in 2003. Goaltender Olie Kolzig said Cassidy had “a lack of professionalism on and off the ice” at the time, ultimately led to his firing 25 games into his second season.

Berube’s Blues, who responded mightily after he succeeded fired coach Mike Yeo on Nov. 19. Before winning 29 of their final 43 games to become the seventh team since 1967 to make the playoffs from last in the league after New Year’s Day, they lost 11 of Berube’s first 20 games as interim replacement.

Nicknamed “Chief” for his First Nations heritage, Berube has never had that look — from his career of more than 1,000 games and 3,000 penalty minutes as a team-first role player to his first head job with Philadelphia when he took over three games into the 2013-14 season.

Flyers players respected Berube’s no-nonsense attitude and simple approach of playing smart, defending well and working as a team.

“A lot of coaches will kind of give you the run-around when you’re not getting ice time,” said Scott Hartnell, who played for Berube’s Flyers teams.

“Where ‘Chief’ is very honest and he’ll let you know exactly what you’re doing wrong and how to fix it and you’ll be rewarded with ice afterwards. It’s a very straightforward approach, which I think a lot of players could learn something about that.”

Tuesday, May 28, 2019
Braves rally past Cards

By Steve Overrey

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Ozzie Albies was not about to back down. The Atlanta infielder finished a 10-pitch at-bat by singing in the tying run in the ninth inning to kick-start the Braves to a 4-3, 10-inning come-from-behind win over the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday.

Brian McCann drew a bases-loaded walk off reliever Tyler Webb for the go-ahead run in the 10th.

Albies forced extra innings by fouling off five consecutive 3-2 pitches from Andrew Miller before ripping a one-out hit to tie the score at 3-3.

“The same way he was trying to get me out, I was trying to get my knock,” Albies said. “I got the hit, we got the run. It was a huge win for us.”

Atlanta, which trailed 3-0 before scoring three in the ninth to tie it, has won 12 of 16 and captured its fifth successive series by winning two of three from St. Louis.

“As he kept fouling off more and more pitches, you could tell his confidence kept growing,” Atlanta infielder Freddie Freeman said. “He was throwing everything he had up there and he kept fouling it off. We were feeling pretty good in the dugout.”

Braves’ infielder Josh Donaldson also saw Albies’ confidence growing with each pitch.

“He relished that moment against a guy that’s got swing-and-miss stuff,” Donaldson said. “We were feeling pretty good in the dugout.”

The Braves won for only the second time in 19 games when trailing after eight innings.

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Brian Snitker
Atlanta Braves manager

St. Louis reliever Webb walks in go-ahead run in 10th

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Freeman reached on an infield single with one out and moved to second on a walk to Donaldson and advanced to third on Nick Markakis’ fly ball to center field. After Austin Riley was intentionally walked to load the bases, McCann drew a five-pitch walk from Tyler Webb (0-1) that brought in Freeman with the go-ahead run.

Ronaldo Acuña Jr. had two hits for Atlanta.

The Cardinals have lost four of six and have not won back-to-back games since May 1.

Donaldson and Riley’s run-scoring hits in the ninth came off closer Jordan Hicks.

St. Louis starter Jack Flaherty gave up three hits and struck out seven in a 91-pitch outing over six scoreless innings.

The Cardinals scored two unearned runs against Atlanta starter Julio Teheran in the fourth. Kolten Wong reached on a two-base error by Riley, who dropped a line drive in left field. Harrison Bader followed with a run-scoring single to right. He eventually scored on a wild throw to the plate by Donaldson at third.

Yadier Molina led off the ninth to tie it, has won back-to-back games and finished the regular season 4-2 against the Red Sox, who beat them 4-1 in the ALCS last season on Sunday.

“Braves’ infielder Josh Donaldson also saw Albies’ confidence growing with each pitch.

“He relished that moment against a guy that’s got swing-and-miss stuff,” Donaldson said. “We were feeling pretty good in the dugout.”

The Braves won for only the second time in 19 games when trailing after eight innings.

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Brian Snitker
Atlanta Braves manager

St. Louis reliever Webb walks in go-ahead run in 10th

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Freeman reached on an infield single with one out and moved to second on a walk to Donaldson and advanced to third on Nick Markakis’ fly ball to center field. After Austin Riley was intentionally walked to load the bases, McCann drew a five-pitch walk from Tyler Webb (0-1) that brought in Freeman with the go-ahead run.

Ronaldo Acuña Jr. had two hits for Atlanta.

The Cardinals have lost four of six and have not won back-to-back games since May 1.

Donaldson and Riley’s run-scoring hits in the ninth came off closer Jordan Hicks.

St. Louis starter Jack Flaherty gave up three hits and struck out seven in a 91-pitch outing over six scoreless innings.

The Cardinals scored two unearned runs against Atlanta starter Julio Teheran in the fourth. Kolten Wong reached on a two-base error by Riley, who dropped a line drive in left field. Harrison Bader followed with a run-scoring single to right. He eventually scored on a wild throw to the plate by Donaldson at third.

Yadier Molina led off the ninth to tie it, has won back-to-back games and finished the regular season 4-2 against the Red Sox, who beat them 4-1 in the ALCS last season on Sunday.

“Braves’ infielder Josh Donaldson also saw Albies’ confidence growing with each pitch.

“He relished that moment against a guy that’s got swing-and-miss stuff,” Donaldson said. “We were feeling pretty good in the dugout.”

The Braves won for only the second time in 19 games when trailing after eight innings.

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Brian Snitker
Atlanta Braves manager

St. Louis reliever Webb walks in go-ahead run in 10th

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Freeman reached on an infield single with one out and moved to second on a walk to Donaldson and advanced to third on Nick Markakis’ fly ball to center field. After Austin Riley was intentionally walked to load the bases, McCann drew a five-pitch walk from Tyler Webb (0-1) that brought in Freeman with the go-ahead run.

Ronaldo Acuña Jr. had two hits for Atlanta.

The Cardinals have lost four of six and have not won back-to-back games since May 1.

Donaldson and Riley’s run-scoring hits in the ninth came off closer Jordan Hicks.

St. Louis starter Jack Flaherty gave up three hits and struck out seven in a 91-pitch outing over six scoreless innings.

The Cardinals scored two unearned runs against Atlanta starter Julio Teheran in the fourth. Kolten Wong reached on a two-base error by Riley, who dropped a line drive in left field. Harrison Bader followed with a run-scoring single to right. He eventually scored on a wild throw to the plate by Donaldson at third.

Yadier Molina led off the ninth to tie it, has won back-to-back games and finished the regular season 4-2 against the Red Sox, who beat them 4-1 in the ALCS last season on Sunday.

“Braves’ infielder Josh Donaldson also saw Albies’ confidence growing with each pitch.

“He relished that moment against a guy that’s got swing-and-miss stuff,” Donaldson said. “We were feeling pretty good in the dugout.”

The Braves won for only the second time in 19 games when trailing after eight innings.

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Brian Snitker
Atlanta Braves manager

St. Louis reliever Webb walks in go-ahead run in 10th

“‘We were dead in the weeds for eight innings. This is a resilient group. They played 27 outs. This was a good one.’

Freeman reached on an infield single with one out and moved to second on a walk to Donaldson and advanced to third on Nick Markakis’ fly ball to center field. After Austin Riley was intentionally walked to load the bases, McCann drew a five-pitch walk from Tyler Webb (0-1) that brought in Freeman with the go-ahead run.

Ronaldo Acuña Jr. had two hits for Atlanta.

The Cardinals have lost four of six and have not won back-to-back games since May 1.

Donaldson and Riley’s run-scoring hits in the ninth came off closer Jordan Hicks.

St. Louis starter Jack Flaherty gave up three hits and struck out seven in a 91-pitch outing over six scoreless innings.

The Cardinals scored two unearned runs against Atlanta starter Julio Teheran in the fourth. Kolten Wong reached on a two-base error by Riley, who dropped a line drive in left field. Harrison Bader followed with a run-scoring single to right. He eventually scored on a wild throw to the plate by Donaldson at third.

Yadier Molina led off the ninth to tie it, has won back-to-back games and finished the regular season 4-2 against the Red Sox, who beat them 4-1 in the ALCS last season on Sunday.
American League

East Division
- New York
- Toronto
- Boston
- Philadelphia
- Miami

Central Division
- Chicago
- Detroit
- Cleveland
- Kansas City
- Milwaukee

West Division
- Houston
- Oakland
- Texas
- Los Angeles

National League

East Division
- Atlanta
- Philadelphia
- New York
- Miami
- Atlanta

Central Division
- Chicago
- Cincinnati
- St. Louis
- Pittsburgh
- St. Louis

West Division
- Los Angeles
- San Diego
- Colorado
- San Francisco

Sunday’s Games
- Texas at Seattle
- Kansas City at Chicago White Sox
- Arizona at San Francisco

Monday’s Games
- Detroit at Baltimore
- San Diego at New York Yankees
- Houston at Philadelphia
- Cincinnati at Washington
- Milwaukee at Minnesota

Totals
- Arizona
- San Francisco

Rockies, 8 Orsels
- Colorado

Athletics, 7 Mariners
- Seattle

Twins, 7 White Sox
- Chicago

Diamondbacks, 6 Giants
- San Francisco

Reds, 10 Cubs
- Cincinnati

Blue Jays, 10 Padres
- San Diego

Brewers, 9 Phillies
- Philadelphia

Royals, 8 Yankees
- New York

Dodgers, 1 Pirates
- Los Angeles

Nationals, 9 Marlins
- Miami

Spring Training
- Spring Training

---

Note: For a comprehensive view, please refer to the full dataset for detailed matchups and statistics.
On basketball

Summer of change: Much more on line than title in finals

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

It all comes down to this. No, really. It ALL comes down to this. The next four, five, six or seven games of the NBA Finals between Golden State and Toronto will not only decide the 2019 championship, but how this series plays out is inevitably going to affect how free agency unfolds starting in a month or so. It'll affect Warriors star Kevin Durant and his annual stay-or-go decision. It'll affect Cousins as well, as his Lakers teammate Kawhi Leonard ponders his next move, or if he'll be moving at all. Plus, it's clear that the decisions they all make in the coming weeks will have a ripple effect on the rest of the NBA.

Durant made clear over the weekend that he's tired of the incessant talk about his future. "I know what I bring to the team," Durant said, "but I also know that a lot of people on the outside don't like to see us together."

New York will be paying intense attention to everything that gets said, tweeted, Instagrammed and intimated. Brooklyn will be in the same boat. So will the Los Angeles Clippers, who think they're on the cusp of building something really good, and the Los Angeles Lakers, who made the biggest signing of last summer by getting LeBron James and have done very little right since.

They will all be waiting to hear what Durant, Cousins and Cousins decide. After that, there's another 60-odd games of the NBA Finals between the teams.

"The latest I've heard from the NBA/SOCCER

The Golden State Warriors and Toronto Raptors will be on the cusp of building something special, but they all are waiting to hear what Kevin Durant and DeMarcus Cousins decide.

After the U.S. misfired in front of the net on a hot afternoon that displayed failings more than facets, the Americans pulled away on the strength of a 25-3 advantage in shots — including 11-0 on target — that very few players have done and something no one has done in a half-century: That lured would undoubtedly be strong. But if they lose this series, it would seem much easier for either to say it's been a great run and it's time to go play somewhere else.

Durant stays, then the Knicks, Nets and Clippers would have to move on to Plan B for free agency.

Therefore, they probably should be rooting for the Raptors.

Durant is difficult to read because he uses social media to give cryptic hints that usually aren't hints at all. His messages are im-possible to read. For all anyone knows, he has already decided to stay in Toronto or sign elsewhere. Or maybe he has no idea about the summer. Maybe he is as robotic as he tries to convey.

But the same theory applies: If Toronto wins this series, it'll be harder for Leonard to leave. So the teams that want him, they might want to root for the Warriors.

Let's use the Knicks solely for example purposes. If they don't get Durant or Leonard, then maybe Irving crosses them off the list. Maybe that would make Kemba Walker climb up the charts. Maybe that means Jordan decides to offer Walker the superstar of $271 million or so to stay in Charlotte.

And the ripple goes on and on. They won't be little waves gently rolling onto the shores, either. This will be a summer of change and a summer of major spending in the NBA. This series is going to be so pivotal, it could be the difference between getting rings. This series will likely decide who plays where for many years to come.

"So it's two sides of the coin. Some people could say, 'Oh my God, look at all that player movement.' On the other hand, that player movement could be very positive for a lot of teams."

"Maybe, maybe not. If the Warriors win this series, as the oddsmakers in Las Vegas expect, it'll be a third consecutive championship for Golden State — and some history. The Celtics, Lakers and Bulls are the only franchises to win three or more in a row. And out of that group, only the Celtics have won four in a row (eight, actually). Michael Jordan never did. Shaquille ONeal and Kobe Bryant never did.

That would be the obvious recruiting pitch the Warriors would make to Durant and Thompson. "Come back and try to win No. 4. Come back and try to do something that very few players have done and something no one has done in a half-century: That lured would undoubtedly be strong. But if they lose this series, it would seem much easier for either to say it's been a great run and it's time to go play somewhere else.

And Cousins..."
SPORTS BRIEFS/FRENCH OPEN

Third horse in 9 days dies at Santa Anita

LOS ANGELES — A third horse has died in nine days at Santa Anita when Kochees, a 9-year-old gelding, was running in his 49th race. It was the 26th death at Santa Anita since Dec. 26. It was the third horse death for trainer Jerry Hollendorfer.

Finland tops Canada at world championships

BRATISLAVA, Slovakia — Marko Anttila helped lead Finland to its third world hockey title, scoring the tying and go-ahead goals in a 3-1 victory over Canada on Sunday.

Anttila tied it at 1 on a power play early in the second period and the Finnish captain made it 2-1 early in the third. Harri Pesonen added an insurance goal with five minutes to play.

Na wins at Colonial by four strokes

FORT WORTH, Texas — Kevin Na birdied four of the first eight holes and shot a 4-under 66 for a four-shot victory over Tony Finau in the Charles Schwab Challenge at Colonial on Sunday.

Na opened with a two-shot lead and was in front by at least that many for the final 16 holes after putting his second shot inside 5 feet for birdie at the par-4 4th. He finished at 11-under 277.

In other golf news:

■ Ken Taniwaga overcame a three-stroke deficit on the back nine to pass defending champion Paul Broadhurst and saved par on the final hole for a one-stroke victory in the Senior PGA Championship for his first senior major.

■ Bronte Law shot a 3-under 69 and held off a series of challengers Sunday to win the Pure Silk Championship by two shots for her first LPGA Tour victory.

Cavaliers owner suffers ‘stroke-like’ symptoms

Cavaliers owner Dan Gilbert, 57, was hospitalized Sunday morning after suffering “stroke-like” symptoms.

A statement from a Quicken Loans spokesperson forwarded to the Beacon Journal/Ohio.com said, “Early this morning, Dan Gilbert sought care at a Detroit area hospital after experiencing stroke-like symptoms. He received immediate medical attention and is currently recovering comfortably. Our collective thoughts and prayers are with Dan for a speedy recovery. “The Gilbert family respectfully requests privacy at this time.”

Novak Djokovic celebrates winning his match against Hubert Hurkacz in the French Open 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, in Paris on Monday.

Serena regroups for win

PARIS — Serena Williams overcame a slow start for a 2-6, 6-1, 6-0 win over 83rd-ranked Vitalia Diatchenko of Russia in her French Open opener.

Williams had completed only three matches since her Australian Open ended four months ago, and she cited a bothersome left knee when pulling out of her past two tournaments.

During an error-filled first set, Williams was constantly shaking her head and yelling at herself.

But the 23-time Grand Slam champion quickly changed the momentum by winning the opening three games of the second set.

After committing 14 unforced errors in the first set, Williams had a total of 8 in the second and third sets.

Afterward, Williams seemed more relieved than pleased at avoiding what would have been only her second loss of her career in the first round of a Grand Slam tournament — after her defeat to Virginie Razzano at Roland Garros in 2012.

Caroline Wozniacki went from playing a perfect set to quickly fading away against an opponent who had never previously won a Grand Slam match.

In a performance emblematic of a difficult season, Wozniacki, a former No. 1 and last year’s Australian Open champion, lost Monday in the first round at Roland Garros 0-6, 6-3, 6-3 to 68th-ranked Veronika Kudermetova of Russia.

“Definitely wasn’t the best match I’ve ever played,” said the 32nd-seeded Wozniacki, who had only 15 winners to Kudermetova’s 40.

The way-up-then-way-down showing by Wozniacki stretched her losing streak to four matches and dropped her 2019 record to 0-8.

Another past Grand Slam champion dropped out of the field Monday when two-time Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitova withdrew because of an injured left forearm.

The left-hander said the arm had been bothering her for some time and during practice Sunday, “suddenly I felt the pain.”

“I have to admit an MRI, and, yeah, unfortunately I have a tear in my forearm, which is not great,” said Kvitova, who hopes to be ready for the start of Wimbledon on July 1.

In other action, Rafael Nadal began his bid for a record 12th championship in Paris and Novak Djokovic got started on his quest for a fourth consecutive major trophy with easy wins.

Nadal was a bit shaky in the very first game against 184th-ranked German qualifier Yan- nick Hanfmann, facing four break points, but he saved them all — and didn’t face another the rest of the way for a 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 victory.

Nadal’s feared forehand was not at its dangerous best, accounting for more unforced errors (11) than winners (nine).

“I had my match plan and, yeah, some of the things, they didn’t work out well,” said Hanfmann, who played college tennis at Southern California. “But, I mean, that’s why he’s as good as he is.”

Djokovic also needed under two hours to reach the second round, running his Grand Slam winning streak to 22 matches by getting past 4th-ranked Hubert Hurkacz of Poland 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

But No. 32 seed Frances Tiafoe of the U.S., a quarterfinalist at the Australian Open in January, threw up a couple of times and his game came apart late in a 6-2, 6-1, 0-6, 6-3 loss to Filip Krajnovic of Serbia.

“Obviously very depleted and had nothing really in me,” said Tiafoe, now 0-4 at Roland Garros.

Other seeded players on the way home included No. 12 Daniil Medvedev, who was eliminated 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2, 7-3 by Pierre-Hugues Herbert and No. 15 Nikoloz Basilashvili on the men’s side, along with No. 18 Julia Goerges on the women’s.

Wozniacki’s preparation for Paris had been hampered by an injured left calf, which was heavily wrapped Monday, but she said that was not an issue against her 22-year-old opponent. The Danish player also said she was not bothered by her rheumatoid arthritis, an autoimmune condition that can cause pain and swelling in the wrist and other joints.

She made only three unforced errors in that opening set, but 18 over the last two.
Driver wins Coca-Cola 600 after damaging tire on Turn 4

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — Martin Truex Jr. gave team owner Joe Gibbs another reason to celebrate at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Truex overcame an early flat tire after hitting the wall, then broke to the front on a wild final restart and won the Coca-Cola 600 for the second time in four seasons Sunday night.

It was the perfect cap to a landmark week for Gibbs and his race team. The three-time Super Bowl champion coach was voted into the NASCAR Hall of Fame on Wednesday, along with two of his race team’s championship drivers in Bobby Labonte and Tony Stewart.

But according to Gibbs, it was Truex, in his first season with JGR, who delivered the program’s biggest moment.

“What was Wednesday?” Gibbs responded when asked if the race victory was bigger than the Hall of Fame.

Gibbs broke into laughter when reminded about his honor. “Obviously, I’m excited about tonight,” he said with a smile.

And Truex provided much of the excitement.

He slid into the Turn 4 wall during the first stage of NASCAR’s longest event, damaging his tire and seemingly putting his chances in serious jeopardy. But crew chief Cole Pearn radioed his driver that things were not that bad and to stay calm and remain focused.

“I thought, ‘We’re done. How we going to fix this thing?’” Truex said. “I didn’t know how bad it was, but the guys worked hard, fixed it up.”

That strategy Truex the rest of the way, especially near the end when he drove low during a four-wide fight for the lead on the final restart at Charlotte Motor Speedway. He had an easier time in the 2016 race when he led 392 of 400 laps.

Truex sprang out low and shot into the front past Kyle Busch, Ryan Newman and David Ragan, who stretched four across the track. “You just never know what can happen,” said Truex, who led 118 laps this time.

Truex held off defending series champion and Team Penske driver Joey Logano — and again prevent owner Roger Penske from Charlotte Motor Speedway. He had an easier time in the 2016 race when he led 392 of 400 laps.

All-star issue

All-Star race winner Kyle Larson had to do his million-dollar winning run at Charlotte a week ago in the 600. Instead, he was a grip in the final stage, hit Clint Bowyer to start a wreck that collected seven drivers. Larson said the fault was his. “Up and down day for us,” Larson said. I finally put myself in a good spot for about a lap and a half and I screwed that up.”

Larson has not won a NASCAR points race since Richmond in September 2017, a span of 59 races.

Gibbs’ tire problems

It wasn’t a completely perfect weekend for Joe Gibbs Racing. While Gibbs made the NASCAR Hall of Fame, the All-Star race with seven drivers in Turn 2 during the third 100-lap segment and never challenged for the victory.

Finks. Erik Jones was out of the race after just 22 laps when his car slid hard into the wall and damaged his right front tire. Truex hit the wall on lap 743 while out front with a two-second lead.

It was with Denny Hamlin’s turn in the second stage as he hit the wall while near the front. Hamlin spun out again on the final lap to finish 17th.

In the Xfinity race Saturday, Gibbs’ racer Christopher Bell was the pole and led 33 of the 49 laps when he was penalized for a rules violation during 30 seconds of silence as part of the Memorial Day solemn ceremonies.

Daly hopes finish brings more races

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Conor Daly needed a solid Indianapolis 500 result to help jump-start his IndyCar career. A top-10 finish can’t hurt — and it might even lead to more wins.

The 27-year-old American stayed near the lead pack through most of Sunday’s race before a surprise ruling and a minor collision during the first restart shuffled him to a 10th-place finish in his only scheduled race this season.

Now comes the hard part: Seeing if a career-best Indy finish pays off.

“I never really know what is good enough,” he said. “You know we’ve been on podiums, we’ve run near the front for a lot of years and led laps. Winning helps, obviously, and we haven’t done that. I don’t what’s enough but I’m not going to go away. I really want to run here full-time.”

Daly certainly turned some heads with what was easily his best finish in six Indy starts. His previous best came last year when Daly finished all but one lap and wound up 21st.

But with one of the series’ top teams and perhaps the best car he’s ever had on Indy’s 2.5-mile oval, it didn’t take Daly long to understand how different things could be this May.

He was near the top of the speed charts in practice and qualified 11th last weekend. Things didn’t change much on race day when he quickly started passing cars and moving up the leaderboard.

With 32 laps to go, he was fourth and Daly was still in contention when five cars were involved in a messy crash on Lap 178. Two laps later, the red flag came out and when the race restarted on Lap 187, officials had reordered Takuma Sato to move in front of Daly, who made his only real mistake on the restart when his gears got stuck as he tried to accelerate.

Otherwise, the son of former race-car driver Derek Daly and the stepson of Indianapolis Motor Speedway President Doug Boles drove almost flawlessly.

“We did a great job all month,” team owner Michael Andretti said. “And really I kind of screwed him up. We told our guys if they can get the front wing (adjustment) in, do it. I should have told them leave the front wing alone and it cost him like three spots. Otherwise he would have been right there with Alex (Rossi),” who finished second to Simon Pagenaud.

Still, it was a promising result for a guy who appeared to be a rising star when he earned his first full-time IndyCar ride in 2016 as a team owner Michael Andretti said. “You know we’ve been on podiums, we’ve run near the front for a lot of years and led laps. Winning helps, obviously, and we haven’t done that. I don’t what’s enough but I’m not going to go away. I really want to run here full-time.”

Daly’s most recent races came in April at Barber Motorsports Park where he drove to victory lane in the Lamborghini Super Trofeo sports car series. He didn’t finish a second race at Barber, and with no more races on this year’s docket, hopes Sunday’s result could give lead to another chance in the IndyCar Series.

“Never you never really know when a shot like this will come with a team like this,” the Andretti Autosport driver said. “I just wish we could be here more often.”

And at least one team is already trying to help Daly.

“We hope so,” Andretti said when asked if Daly might run more races with the team this season. “We’re working on a few things.”
PAGENEAU HOLDS ON FOR INDY WIN

Penske driver arrived with job on the line, leaves as champion

BY JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Simon Pagenaud arrived at Indianapolis Motor Speedway this month with his job on the line and rumors swirling around Gasoline Alley that Alexander Rossi could soon replace him at Team Penske.

“Nothing else matters but winning,” Rossi said. “Absolutely.”

In a head-to-head duel for the ages, Pagenaud defeated none other than Rossi with a dramatic pass on the penultimate lap, then holding on the rest of the way to hand Penske himself that he isn’t going anywhere.

“Do I even have to answer that?” Penske asked. “Absolutely.”

Out a primal scream, then dumped the entire bottle of milk over his head.

“I never expected to be in this position,” Pagenaud said. “I certainly am grateful.”

President Donald Trump phoned Penske in victory lane from Japan, where he was meeting with Prime Minister Shinzo Abe over trade. Penske passed the phone to Pagenaud, and Trump later tweeted an invite to the White House for the winning team.

Penske now has two consecutive Indy 500 victories — Will Power won last year — for the first time since 2002-03. It was his third win in the crown jewel race in the past five years and fifth in the past 14.

It was a banner day, too, with Josef Newgarden leading the top four spots in qualifying, won the race winner twice charged to the front in the closing laps of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday. Pagenaud won his first Indy 500, making an audacious pass of Rossi before taking the white flag and holding the hard-charging driver from Andretti Autosport.

Penske driver arrived with job on the line, leaves as champion

Simon Pagenaud, right, leads Alexander Rossi and Takuma Sato into the first turn in the closing laps of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday. Pagenaud won his first Indy 500, making an audacious pass of Rossi before taking the white flag and holding the hard-charging driver from Andretti Autosport.

It was a dream come true. A lifetime trying to achieve this,” said Pagenaud, who dismissed the thought over job security as he celebrated his first Indy 500 win. “The milk motivated me. I was just focused on the job, man.”

Pagenaud was dominant all day, leading 116 of the 200 laps, and the win was cathartic. He stopped his car at the start-finish line and hopped out to share the moment with his fans. And once he finally made his way to victory lane, Pagenaud climbed from his car and let out a primal scream, then dumped the entire bottle of milk over his head.

“He’s a dream come true. A lifetime trying to achieve this,” said Pagenaud, who dismissed the thought over job security as he celebrated his first Indy 500 win. “The milk motivated me. I was just focused on the job, man.”

Penske driver arrived with job on the line, leaves as champion

Simon Pagenaud kisses the Yard of Bricks after winning the Indy 500 on Sunday in Indianapolis.

R BRENT SMITH/AP

Simon Pagenaud crosses the finish line on the start of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday.

Rob Baker/AP

Simon Pagenaud crosses the finish line on the start of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday.

Rob Baker/AP

INDIANAPOLIS 500

Scoreboard

Indianapolis 500
Sunday
Indianapolis Motor Speedway
Indianapolis (Post position in parentheses)

1. (1) Simon Pagenaud, France, 200, Running 2:50:39.2797, Margin of victory was a mere 0.2086 seconds — the seventh-closest finish in the 103 years of the Indianapolis records count five French winners, Pagenaud was the 21st winner from Andretti Autosport. “I think we had the superior car. We just didn’t have enough there at the end.”

Penske now has two consecutive Indy 500 victories — Will Power won last year — for the first time since 2002-03. It was his third win in the crown jewel race in the past five years and fifth in the past 14.

It was a banner day, too, with Josef Newgarden leading the top four spots in qualifying, won the race winner twice charged to the front in the closing laps of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday. Pagenaud won his first Indy 500, making an audacious pass of Rossi before taking the white flag and holding the hard-charging driver from Andretti Autosport.

It was a dream come true. A lifetime trying to achieve this,” said Pagenaud, who dismissed the thought over job security as he celebrated his first Indy 500 win. “The milk motivated me. I was just focused on the job, man.”

Penske now has two consecutive Indy 500 victories — Will Power won last year — for the first time since 2002-03. It was his third win in the crown jewel race in the past five years and fifth in the past 14.

It was a banner day, too, with Josef Newgarden leading the top four spots in qualifying, won the race winner twice charged to the front in the closing laps of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday. Pagenaud won his first Indy 500, making an audacious pass of Rossi before taking the white flag and holding the hard-charging driver from Andretti Autosport.

It was a dream come true. A lifetime trying to achieve this,” said Pagenaud, who dismissed the thought over job security as he celebrated his first Indy 500 win. “The milk motivated me. I was just focused on the job, man.”

Penske now has two consecutive Indy 500 victories — Will Power won last year — for the first time since 2002-03. It was his third win in the crown jewel race in the past five years and fifth in the past 14.

It was a banner day, too, with Josef Newgarden leading the top four spots in qualifying, won the race winner twice charged to the front in the closing laps of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday. Pagenaud won his first Indy 500, making an audacious pass of Rossi before taking the white flag and holding the hard-charging driver from Andretti Autosport.
SPORTS

INDIANAPOLIS 500

SPECTACULAR!

Pagenaud outduels Rossi on penultimate lap to give Penske golden Indy 500 victory » Page 31

Simon Pagenaud celebrates winning the Indy 500 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Sunday in Indianapolis. AP photos

US women win final test before title defense » Page 28

Serena storms back
23-time Grand Slam champ overcomes slow start » Page 29