After the death of Russian mercenary chief Yevgeny Prigozhin in a plane crash on Aug. 23, northwest of Moscow, Russian officials moved quickly to take control of the Wagner military contractor's personnel and assets abroad. U.S. Gen. Michael Langley told the Senate Armed Services Committee that Russia is moving in on African countries.

Africa falling prey to Russia

US general warns senators big moves being made in several countries

By John Vandiver Stars and Stripes

STUTTGART, Germany — Russia is making aggressive moves in Africa in a bid to dominate regions spanning from NATO's southern doorstep in Libya to resource-rich parts of central Africa, a top U.S. general told Congress.

Russia and China both have long-term plans for Africa but Russia is moving "at an accelerated pace," U.S. Africa Command's Gen. Michael Langley said during the Senate Armed Services Committee testimony Thursday. "A number of countries are at the tipping point of actually being captured by the Russian Federation," Langley said.

Like China, Russia has made inroads in Africa on multiple fronts. Langley said Russian operatives have taken advantage of unrest in western Africa, where there have been a series of coups in recent years.

American involvement in places such as Niger and Mali has been curtailed because of government overthrows. But that also has opened the door to a larger Russian presence.

Langley said Russian security forces, both private contractors and state actors, have upped their presence in the coup-wracked countries, as well as Libya and the Central African Republic.

"They want power projection capabilities," Langley said, adding that gaining access to natural resources, including rare-earth minerals, are part of the attraction.

"I think at an accelerated pace, the Russian

Pentagon IG starts probe into Navy's suicide rate

By Gary Warner Stars and Stripes

The Defense Department inspector general is sending investigators to several Navy installations to evaluate suicide rates, the Pentagon confirmed Thursday.

Site visits are planned for Naval Base Kitsap in Washington, Naval Base San Diego, Naval Station Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, and Naval Air Station Norfolk in Virginia, according to a memo about the review. It will also look at suicides and suicide attempts on ships at sea. Dates for inspections at each facility have not been announced.

The Pentagon said investigators could visit additional installations as the review moves forward. The timing and scope of the review will not be released in advance.

The suicide review was mandated in the 2023 National Defense Authorization Act, which sets policy and spending priorities for the Pentagon.

The Navy has reported an increase in suicides and suicide attempts in recent years, with 71 suicides by active-duty sailors in 2022. The service reported 65 suicides in 2020 and 59 in 2021. Final statistics for 2023 are not yet available.

Suicide rates differ because of fluctuations in the number of Navy personnel each year. The rate per 100,000 active-duty sailors was 20.6 in 2022, 17 in 2021 and 19 in 2020, according to the Pentagon's 2022 annual report on suicide in the military.

A federal study in 2021 found 30,177 active-duty personnel and veterans in all service branches who served in the military died from suicide in the 20 years after the 9/11 terrorist attacks. It was more than four times higher than

Microsoft says it can't shake Russian state hackers

Associated Pres

BOSTON — Microsoft said Friday it's still trying to evict the elite Russian government hackers who broke into the email accounts of senior company executives in November and who it said have been trying to breach customer networks with stolen access data.

The hackers from Russia's SVR foreign intelligence service used data obtained in the intrusion, which it disclosed in mid-January, to compromise some source-code repositories and internal systems, the software giant said in a blog.

A company spokesman would not characterize what source code was accessed and what capability the hackers gained to further compromise customer and Microsoft systems. Microsoft said Friday that the hackers stole "secrets" from email communications between the company and unspecified customers — cryptographic secrets such as passwords, certificates and authentication keys — and that it was reaching out to them "to assist in taking mitigating measures."

Cloud-computing company Hewlett Packard Enterprise disclosed on Jan. 24 that it, too, was an SVR hacking victim and that it had been informed of the breach two weeks earlier, coinciding with Microsoft's discovery it had been hacked.

"The threat actor's ongoing attack is characterized by a sustained, significant commitment of the threat actor's resources, coordination, and focus," Microsoft said Friday.

US Marines reinforce embassy in Haiti

Some staff evacuated as country's capital turned into battlefield by heavily armed gangs

By Jacqueline Charles
Miami Herald

As heavily armed gangs continue to challenge Haiti's weak government and turn the country's capital into a battlefield, the State Department on Sunday flew in U.S. Marines to reinforce its embassy and evacuate non-essential personnel.

The middle-of-the-night operation was conducted via helicopter by the U.S. military at the request of the State Department, the U.S. Southern Command said in a statement.

"This airlift of personnel into and out of the embassy is consistent with our standard practice for embassy security augmentation worldwide, and no Haitians were on board the military aircraft," the statement said.

The airlift comes amid ongoing gang attacks in multiple locations around metropolitan Port-au-

Prince, including Tabarre, where the U.S. embassy is located. Several nearby businesses have been looted and overtaken by armed gangs that today control more than 80% of the capital.

Since last Thursday, armed groups have led a coordinated attack, demanding the resignation of Prime Minister Ariel Henry, and targeting key Haitian government institutions. After taking control of several police stations, they targeted the main seaport before orchestrating a mass prison break at the two largest prisons. Thousands of inmates were freed by the gangs, including several notorious gang leaders.

The gangs have also launched attacks against the international and domestic airports. Heavy gunfire around the airports has led to the suspension of international flights into the country. Henry, who is under pressure by the United States and the Caribbean Community to resign, remains outside of the country, unable to return.

In response to the attacks, Haiti recently extended a 72-hour state of emergency and curfew to a month, and deployed members of its fledgling army to assist the Haiti National Police. To help in the fight against gangs, the U.S. government recently provided the police with additional ammo.

2 National Guardsmen, border agent killed in Texas helo crash ID'd

Associated Press

LA GRULLA, Texas — A National Guard soldier from New York who was seriously injured in the crash of a helicopter flying over the U.S.-Mexico border remained hospitalized Sunday while authorities released the names of the two National Guard soldiers and a Border Patrol agent who were killed.

The three killed Friday in the crash near Rio Grande City were: Chief Warrant Officer 2 Casey Frankoski, 28, and Chief Warrant Officer 2 John Grassia, 30, both with the New York National Guard; and Border Patrol Agent Chris Luna, 49. The cause of the crash remains under investigation.

The UH-72 Lakota helicopter was assigned to the federal government's border security mission when it went down, according to a statement released by Joint Task Force North, a military unit that supports Customs and Border Protection.

The injured soldier is from the New York National Guard, according to the National Guard Bureau. The soldier, whose name isn't being released, is the aircraft crew chief. The soldier remained hospitalized, according to a release posted by the New York State Division of Military & Naval Affairs.

Maj. Gen. Ray Shields, the adjutant general of New York, said in the release that they are "shocked and devastated" by the deaths of Frankoski and Grassia, and are "praying for the quick recovery" of the injured crew chief.

U.S. Customs and Border Patrol Commissioner Troy Miller said in a statement that they were "heartbroken" by the death of Luna, who is survived by his wife and two children, parents and brother.

Secretary of Homeland Security Alejandro Mayorkas said in a statement that they are hoping for the injured national guardsman's "swift recovery," and said his thoughts and the "deepest condolences" of the department were with the families of those killed.

Grassia, who was a New York state trooper, was from Schenectady, N.Y., and he enlisted in the New York Army National Guard in 2013 as a UH-60 Black Hawk helicopter maintenance specialist, according to the New York State Division of Military & Naval Affairs. The release said that Frankoski, of Rensselaer, N.Y., enlisted in the New York Army National Guard in 2016 and she trained to become a UH-60 Black Hawk and UH-72 Lakota helicopter pilot.

New York Gov. Kathy Hochul said in a statement that she was "deeply saddened" by the deaths of Grassia and Frankoski.

"There is no greater calling than service to and defense of your country," she said.

Frankoski and Grassia were assigned to Detachment 2, Company A, 1st Battalion, 244th Aviation Regiment. Luna was assigned to the Border Patrol's Rio Grande City Station.

The helicopter that crashed was assigned to the District of Columbia Army National Guard, according to the New York State Division of Military & Naval Affairs release.

In January, a Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter patrolling the state's border with Mexico lost power and crashed, officials said at the time.

The co-pilot suffered a minor hand injury and the helicopter was significantly damaged. That helicopter was flying as part of Operation Lone Star, Texas Gov. Greg Abbott's nearly $10 billion border mission.

U.S. MV-22B Osprey transport aircraft are parked at Marine Corps Air Station Futenma, Okinawa, on Sept. 6. The Osprey fleet has been approved to return to flight after a fatal crash in Japan in November.

Ospreys cleared to fly 3 months after latest fatal crash in Japan

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Osprey, a workhorse aircraft vital to U.S. military missions, has been approved to return to flight after an "unprecedented" part failure led to the deaths of eight service members in a crash in Japan in November, Naval Air Systems Command announced Friday.

The crash was the second fatal accident in months and the fourth in two years. It quickly led to a rare fleet-wide grounding of hundreds of Ospreys across the Marine Corps, Air Force and Navy.

Before clearing the Osprey, which can fly like an airplane and then convert to a helicopter, officials said they put increased attention on its proprotor gearbox, instituted new limitations on how it can be flown and added maintenance inspections and requirements that gave them confidence it could safely return to flight.

The entire fleet was grounded Dec. 6, just a week after eight Air Force Special Operations Command service members were killed when their CV-22B Osprey crashed off Yakushima island.

Before lifting the flight restrictions the military also briefed officials in Japan, where public opinion on the Osprey is mixed, on the crash findings and new safety measures. In a statement Friday, Japan defense minister Minoru Kihara said his nation would likewise return its 14 Ospreys to flight status following an "adequate" analysis of the cause of the crash, extremely detailed information on the accident and the steps to mitigate the issue in the future.

Kihara said Japan and the United States will closely coordinate the timeline for resuming flights in Japan, to give the government time to "thoroughly" explain the issue to its citizens.

However, Okinawa Gov. Denny Tamaki did not support the return to flight. Okinawa is home to Marine Corps Air Station Futenma and its 24 MV-22B Ospreys and is where the public has been most vocal in its opposition to the aircraft.

"It would be best if they stay on the ground, as we have all along requested scrapping of the Osprey deployment," Tamaki said.

A former Osprey pilot familiar with the investigation confirmed that the component in question is part of the proprotor gearbox, a critical system that includes gearing and clutches that connect the Osprey's engine to the rotor to turn it.

The services have done a "deep dive" into the proprotor gearbox, and the new safety measures "will address the issues we saw from that catastrophic event," the head of Air Force Special Operations Command, Lt. Gen. Tony Bauernfeind, said Wednesday.

"I have confidence that we know enough now to return to fly," he said

The investigation, known as an accident investigation board, will be made public and is expected to be completed within the next two months.

Forces reflect on key takeaways as Cobra Gold ends

By ALEX WILSON Stars and Stripes

RAYONG, Thailand — Thousands of troops from 30 nations started for home Friday as the largest military exercise in mainland Asia officially came to a close.

More than 9,000 service members from 30 countries — including 4,500 troops from the U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps — gathered throughout Thailand beginning Feb. 27 for Cobra Gold, the world's longestrunning annual exercise of its kind.

Over nearly two weeks, those troops made amphibious assaults and airborne drops, fired live artillery rounds, trained for jungle survival and took part in community relations projects and other activities

Lt. Col. Lindsay Mathwick, commander Combat Logistics Battalion 15 and Marines aboard the amphibious transport dock USS Somerset, said she visited each training area where members of the 15th Marine Expeditionary Unit were engaged.

"We learned so much as a force," she told Stars and Stripes by email Friday.

"Some of our Marines also had the opportunity to participate in community relations events with locals — a truly memorable experience," Mathwick wrote. "But what truly moved me and showed me the impact we have coming to participate in these exercises, was seeing the Marines laughing, eating, and sharing stories with each other during their breaks."

Marines also exchanged photos, uniform patches and information that "makes us a more powerful team," she said.

This year's exercise served as a reminder that the United States and its allies share common goals, said Army Maj. General Matthew McFarlane, deputy commander of I Corps, the overall joint force command for Cobra Gold.

"Everyone is interested in participating here to build relationships with regional partners that are interested in a stable and secure, free and open Indo-Pacific," he said on a conference call Thursday. "That's a key message that we got from everybody."

Thailand, the host nation, is a "key partner in the region" for building those relationships and maintaining readiness, McFarlane said. The nation has maintained official diplomatic ties with the United States since 1833, nearly 200 years.

Cobra Gold is "a positive example of multilateral cooperation, as is demonstrated by the continued increase in participating nations; everyone walks away from this better and able to solve problems together," he said.

A key takeaway this year is the growing importance of cybersecurity and cyberwarfare, McFarlane said. Other lessons included the importance and utility of equipment and technology, such as those used to communicate between nations.

This was McFarlane's fourth Cobra Gold; his first was in 1996. Since then, the exercise has grown from primarily combat operations between U.S. and Thai forces to vast, multinational training with many more scenarios and drills.

"So, it's certainly a wider variety and a larger contingent working at multiple echelons," he said.

Planning for next year's Cobra Gold is already underway, though it's too early to provide details, McFarlane said.

"We're building upon the progress to date, but that doesn't mean we'll do the exact same thing and just do it bigger," he told Stars and Stripes. "Sometimes we'll add different things. You know, the senior Thai military leadership are going to be specific about different aspects that they want to train or be better at."

US Marines make 'lasting impression' on migrant kids in Thailand

By ALEX WILSON Stars and Stripes

PATTAYA, Thailand — Children clad in bright pink polo shirts laughed, danced and cheered during a visit from U.S. Marines taking a community-relations break from two weeks of Cobra Gold military drills.

Around a dozen members of the 15th Marine Expeditionary unit joined more than 40 kids at the Martin Brands Childcare center in Pattaya for local games and a dance competition in the courtyard. Upstairs, Marines did arts and crafts with the younger children.

"I love doing stuff like this — I try to get out and help or interact with the communities wherever I go. I did a lot of this when I was in Japan," Staff Sgt. Jimmy Sannon, a maintenance chief, told Stars and Stripes during Wednesday's visit. "I love seeing the smile on their faces; that's what it is."

The day care visit was one of several community relations projects the Marines took on as part of Cobra Gold, the largest military exercise in mainland Asia, which drew to a close on Friday.

The day care students, many of them the children of migrant workers, come predominantly from neighboring Myanmar, Laos and Cambodia and are unable to enroll in Thai schools, said Peter Thorand, president of the Navy League of the United States — Siam Council.

At the Martin Brand center, the children are supervised and given Thai and English language lessons while their parents are away during the day, he said.

"I think when you see the result, the kids love it and it's a good experience for your people," Thorand said.

U.S. troops rarely interact with people from those three countries, he added.

Thailand, a comparatively prosperous country in the region, is a key destination for "migrants, displaced persons and asylum seekers," according to a United Nations report from 2019, the most recent on the country's migration trends.

Before the pandemic, migrants, especially from neighboring countries, were coming to Thailand in increasing numbers and constituted about 10% of the nation's labor force, the report states

Thorand, a retired maintenance engineer from Vancouver, Canada, said he and the Siam Council have been involved in Cobra Gold community projects for decades. He said the projects not only benefit the community, they provide an opportunity for Cobra Gold participants to see the "real country."

"These community relations projects are maybe one of the most important things you guys can do," he said.

Many students have never interacted with Americans.

"You leave a lasting impression on the people," Thorand said.

The students also get a chance to practice their English, said Staff Sgt. Kyle Peterson, a utilities specialist with the 15th MEU. Some tried the teach Marines phrases in Thai during the arts-and-craft session, he said.

"Honestly, it's just really humbling how much they're willing to learn and how much effort they're actually putting into it here," he said.

"I think it's just as simple as it is; it's about being where you can be somebody's hero," Peterson said. "It's not just painting butterflies, but just something as simple as going to play with them downstairs or painting pictures with them up here."

Government: Rape claim a worker's comp issue

Officials ask court to dismiss lawsuit regarding incident on transport ship

By Rose L. Thayer Stars and Stripes

The U.S. government has asked a New Jersey federal court to pause a lawsuit that alleges the Navy's negligence led to a civilian engineer's rape aboard a transport ship so the woman can instead file a claim for a work-related injury with the Labor Department, according to court documents.

The arguments "demonstrate a shocking lack of concern for the circumstances" in which Elsie Dominguez claims she was raped by the captain of the Navy transport ship on which she worked, said Christine Dunn, an attorney representing Dominguez in the lawsuit filed in November.

Dominguez, a 2014 graduate of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, was working as the first assistant engineer aboard the USNS Carson City, an expeditionary fast transport vessel, in December 2021 when she said the ship's captain used a master key code to access her private room overnight and rape her in her bed. The Navy failed to care for and protect her when she reported the attack the next morning using the proper reporting procedures, according to the suit.

The Navy also failed to have appropriate security measures in place to prevent the assault from occurring, according to the suit, which does not name the civilian captain. The ship, part of the Navy's Military Sealift Command, lacked oversight of the captain's use of a master key code that gave him complete access to the vessel, as well as working security cameras and

The Labor Department manages claims under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, the federal law that pays medical expenses and compensation benefits to workers for injuries obtained while performing their duties.

In court documents, attorneys for the Justice Department argued Dominguez was aboard the ship because her job required it, and that makes it a worker's compensation issue.

"The ship was deployed, and as a practical matter she had no other place to live. The alleged assault occurred in her stateroom, a government premises. On these facts, a substantial likelihood of [worker's compensation] coverage exists," according to the document.

"She was living on that ship for years, and it really can't be the case that absolutely everything that happens to her on that ship would be worker's comp. That doesn't make sense — certainly not for something like being raped in her sleep in her bed," Dunn said.

HALEY NACE/U.S. Navy

The USNS Carson City, an expeditionary fast transport ship, in 2016.

If the court were to agree with the government, Dominguez would be able to return to the lawsuit if the Labor Department denied the claim, according to court documents. If the court disagrees, the case will continue. The court is expected to rule on the government's motion March 18.

The Naval Criminal Investigative Service has an ongoing investigation into the allegations, according to court documents.

The Navy's Military Sealift Command operates 130 civilian-crewed ships that replenish Navy ships, conduct special missions and strategically move and preposition cargo at sea around the world, Tom Van Leunen, command spokesman, said last year.

At that time, the workforce was comprised of 5,547 civilian mariners working aboard ships, 1,434 civilians in shore jobs, 347 active-duty service members and 956 reservists.

The Carson City, the ship on which Dominguez worked, is a catamaran with a flight deck for helicopter operations and a loading ramp to enable vehicles to drive on and off the ship quickly.

On the night that Dominguez said she was raped, she believes someone drugged her while at a bar in Brindisi, Italy, where the ship was docked. After one beer and one shot, she felt overly intoxicated and required two people to bring her back on the ship to her room, where she was left alone and unconscious, according to court documents. During the night, the captain of the ship entered her room using a master key code and raped her, she claims.

She attempted to report the assault the next day but was given false information that discouraged her from making the report, according to court documents

After the assault, Dominguez still lived in the room where the rape occurred for nearly two years, though she was able to have a deadbolt lock installed on the door. She filed a criminal report in June and took leave in October, her attorney said.

when his motorcycle collided with a vehicle on an Okinawa roadway, according to Japanese police.

The 24-year-old Marine was southbound on Route 58 in the Oyama section of Ginowan city around 6:50 p.m. when he struck a vehicle turning right at a T-junction, a spokesman for Okinawa Prefectural Police told Stars and Stripes by phone Friday.

The Marine suffered a head injury and was confirmed dead at a local hospital at 7:29 p.m., the spokesman said. The vehicle's driver was not injured, he said. A III Marine Expeditionary Force spokesman, Capt. Alejandro Arteaga, said the collision happened while the Marine was off duty.

"We are cooperating with local authorities in their investigation of the accident," Arteaga said by email Friday. "Pending official notification of the Marine's next of kin, no further details will be released at this time. We extend our heartfelt condolences to those impacted by this tragedy."

A witness reported the accident to police, the police spokesman said. The crash's cause is in under investigation.

Army soldier accused of selling military info

Intelligence analyst allegedly conspired to disclose photos, documents since 2022

By Kimberlee Kruesi Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — An Army soldier has been arrested on accusations of selling sensitive information related to U.S. military capabilities, Justice Department officials said Thursday.

Sgt. Korbein Schultz, who is also an intelligence analyst, was accused in a six-count indictment of charges including conspiring to obtain and disclose military defense information and bribery of a public official. The 24-year-old was arrested at Fort Campbell, which straddles the Tennessee-Kentucky border, shortly after the indictment was released Thursday.

"The men and women of the United States Armed Forces dedicate their lives to maintain our national security," Henry C. Leventis, U.S. attorney for the Middle District of Tennessee, told reporters. "Our laws protecting national defense information are critical to that mission, and they must be enforced. Illegal dissemination of national defense information puts our country, our fellow citizens, members of our military and our allies at risk."

According to the indictment, Schultz—who had a top-secret security clearance—allegedly conspired with an individual identified only as "Conspirator A" to disclose various documents, photographs and other national defense materials since June 2022. The indictment claims that Schultz was recruited by the individual not only due to his security clearance but also because he was tasked with gathering sensitive U.S. military information.

Some of the information that Schultz supposedly gave to the individual included information related to the High Mobility Artillery Rocket System, hypersonic equipment, studies on future developments of U.S. military forces and studies on military drills and operations in major countries like China.

The indictment outlines that Schultz was initially asked to provide documents detailing lessons that could be learned from Russia's war with Ukraine and how those lessons could be applied to the U.S. helping Taiwan in the event of an attack. Schultz was paid $200 for that information, which then prompted Conspirator A, to ask for a "long-term partnership."

Conspirator A, who was described in the indictment as a foreign national purporting to reside in Hong Kong, later suggested that Schultz could earn more money if he handed over "internal only" material rather than unclassified documents.

In total, Shultz received at least 14 payments totaling $42,000.

"The defendant and his co-conspirator also discussed recruiting another member of the U.S. military to join their conspiracy and to provide additional national defense information in order to conceal their illegal conduct," Leventis said.

Army spokesperson Lt. Col. Ruth Castro said in a statement that Schultz has been in the Army since November 2018 and his hometown is Wills Point, Texas.

Schultz was previously assigned to Fort Cavazos, Texas, and was deployed once to Eastern Europe, according to Lt. Col. Tony Hoefler, a spokesperson for Fort Campbell.

The case is the latest in a series of federal prosecutions of current or former military members accused of illegally disclosing sensitive government secrets.

For instance in April 2023, Massachusetts Air National Guard member Jack Teixeira was charged with leaking highly classified military documents about Russia's war in Ukraine on Discord, a social media platform popular with people playing online games.

He pleaded guilty on Monday in a deal with prosecutors that calls for him to serve at least 11 years in prison.

In August, two U.S. Navy sailors were charged with providing sensitive military information to China—including details on wartime exercises, naval operations and critical technical material.

And more recently, the Justice Department announced charges this week against a civilian Air Force employee and retired Army lieutenant colonel for allegedly sharing classified information about the war in with Ukraine on a foreign dating site.

The review will "determine whether the Department of Navy effectively took actions to prevent and respond to incidents of deaths by suicide, suicide attempts and suicidal ideation among members of the Navy assigned to sea duty or shore duty," according to a Feb. 27 memo from the inspector general's office.

"Additionally, we do not disclose our tactics, techniques or procedures used to perform our evaluations," said Mollie Halperin, a spokeswoman for the Defense Department Office of Inspector General.

Installations visited by investigators must also assign a rear admiral or high-ranking civilian employee to respond to questions. The Navy's Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness and the Defense Health Agency will lead the review. When the review is completed, it will be published on the inspector general's website.

The memo said the review could lead to revisions in how the Navy manages and evaluates its programs.

Philippines strikes security deals as tensions rise with China at sea

By REGINE CABATO
The Washington Post

MANILA — The Philippines has been striking new defense agreements with other countries at a rapid clip, seeking to build what officials here call a "network of alliances" that could deter Chinese aggression in disputed waters

The Philippines has signed or entered discussions over new security agreements with at least 18 countries since a Chinese coast guard vessel flashed a military-grade laser at a Philippine coast guard ship in the South China Sea last year, according to the Philippine Defense Department.

While the deepening Philippine alliance with the United States — which includes granting the U.S. military expanded access to Philippine military bases — has drawn much attention, Manila's security campaign goes beyond Washington.

President Ferdinand Marcos Jr. made nearly a dozen overseas visits in 2023, many to seek security assistance and military equipment. This year, his schedule includes delivering a rare address before the Australian Parliament as well as the keynote speech at Asia's premier defense summit, the Shangri-La Dialogue, in Singapore.

Since 2022, the Philippines has inked new defense agreements with the European Union, India and Britain. Japan, Canada and France are looking at signing visiting-forces agreements with the Philippines, which would allow those countries to send troops to Philippine bases, according to their embassies.

If adopted, these agreements would give the Philippines one of the most robust security networks in Asia, expanding the global stakes in the rising tensions over the South China Sea, Philippine officials say. "Given that we are the underdog, we leverage our relationships with other countries," said Jonathan Malaya, assistant director of the country's National Security Council. "Our network of alliances is critical."

China claims much of the South China Sea, part of the Pacific Ocean that is bounded by China, Taiwan, Indonesia, the Philippines, Malaysia, Vietnam and Brunei. In recent years, China has stepped up its presence in these waters.

Off the coast of the Philippines, Chinese ships have swarmed Philippine vessels and ignored appeals by Philippine officials to stop their aggression.

Last week, a Chinese coast guard ship fired water cannons at a Philippine coast guard vessel, shattering a windscreen and injuring four personnel, Philippine authorities said.

Last year, Marcos's administration responded with what it called a policy of "assertive transparency," broadcasting videos of aggressive Chinese actions at sea. But in recent interviews, top officials said the country needs more than a publicity campaign to defend its sovereignty.

China has previously accused the Philippines and the United States of fueling tension in the South China Sea. Asked by reporters last year about joint air and maritime patrols between the Philippine and U.S. forces that launched in November, Wu Qian, a spokesperson for China's Defense Ministry, said Washington had "instigated and emboldened the Philippine side to infringe upon China's sovereignty."

More recently, Ji Lingpeng, spokesman for the Chinese Embassy in Manila, said that "bringing in outside forces and forming 'small circles' will not help resolve disputes in the South China Sea, but only complicate the regional situation [and] undermine regional peace and stability."

Philippine officials disagree, saying their country is standing up for its sovereignty, not acting on behalf of Washington. And with a third of the world's shipping passing through South China Sea, diplomats in Manila say many countries — not just the United States — have good reason to deter Chinese aggression.

If other nations don't defend international law, the "right of might" wins, Luc Véron, the European Union's ambassador to the Philippines, said in an interview. "We cannot accept that our freedom of navigation in South China Sea will be impeded ... by any players," he added.

Poland changes its view on NATO troops in Ukraine

By Vanessa Gera Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — Poland's foreign minister says the presence of NATO forces in Ukraine "is not unthinkable" and that he appreciates the French president for not ruling out that idea.

Radek Sikorski made the observation during a discussion marking the 25th anniversary of Poland's accession to NATO in the Polish parliament Friday, and the Foreign Ministry tweeted the comments later in English.

They reflect a larger European debate over how to help Ukraine as Russia has gained some momentum on the battlefield and Kyiv is running low on ammunition. The U.S. Congress is withholding aid that Ukraine says it critically needs to hold off the Russians, putting more pressure on Europe to respond to the war that has shattered peace on the Continent.

Last month French President Emmanuel Macron said the possibility of Western troops being sent to Ukraine could not be ruled out, a comment that broke a taboo among allies and prompted an outcry from other leaders. French officials later sought to clarify Macron's remarks and tamp down the backlash, while insisting on the need to send a clear signal to Russia that it cannot win its war in Ukraine.

The Kremlin has warned that if NATO sends combat troops, a direct conflict between the alliance and Russia would be inevitable. Russian President Vladimir Putin said such a move would risk a global nuclear conflict.

Poland's Prime Minister Donald Tusk was among those European leaders who initially ruled out sending troops to Ukraine after Macron's remarks, saying: "Poland does not plan to send its troops to the territory of Ukraine."

But less than two weeks later Sikorski struck a different tone.

"The presence of #NATO forces in Ukraine is not unthinkable," he said, according to the Foreign Ministry's tweet. He said he appreciated Macron's initiative "because it is about Putin being afraid, not us being afraid of Putin."

Sikorski's remark is part of a broader shift to align with Macron's position, wrote Phillips O'Brien, professor of strategic studies at the University of St. Andrews, Scotland.

"The issue of sending European forces to help Ukraine was never one to be dismissed—it was always a possibility," O'Brien wrote in an email analysis sent to subscribers Saturday. "In fact it has become more of one as the USA has stepped back and withdrawn aid. Europe is now faced with a terrible dilemma—watching Ukraine potentially run out of ammunition, or stepping in and helping Ukraine more directly."

Polish President Andrzej Duda and Tusk will travel to Washington for a meeting at the White House on Tuesday, a visit the Poles hope they can use to spur the United States to do more to help Ukraine.

Pope's 'white flag' comment met by criticism from Ukraine and its allies

Associated Press

KYIV, Ukraine — Ukrainian and allied officials criticized Pope Francis for saying that Kyiv should have the "courage" to negotiate an end to the war with Russia, a statement many interpreted as a call for Ukraine to surrender.

The foreign minister of Poland, a vocal ally of Kyiv, and Ukraine's ambassador to the Vatican, both used World War II analogies to condemn the pope's remarks. And a leader of one of Ukraine's Christian churches on Sunday said that only the country's determined resistance to Moscow's full-scale invasion, launched by Russian President Vladimir Putin on Feb. 24, 2022, had prevented a mass slaughter of civilians.

In an interview recorded last month with Swiss broadcaster RSI and partially released on Saturday, Francis used the phrase "the courage of the white flag" as he argued that Ukraine, facing a possible defeat, should be open to peace talks brokered by international powers.

"How about, for balance, encouraging Putin to have the courage to withdraw his army from Ukraine? Peace would immediately ensue without the need for negotiations," Polish Foreign Minister Radek Sikorski responded with a post on X, formerly Twitter.

In a separate post, Sikorski drew parallels between those calling for negotiations while "denying (Ukraine) the means to defend itself" and European leaders' "appeasement" of Adolf Hitler just before World War II.

Andrii Yurash, Ukraine's ambassador to the Holy See, said that it was "necessary to learn lessons" from that conflict. His tweet appeared to compare the pope's comments to calls for "talking with Hitler" while raising "a white flag to satisfy him."

Vatican spokesman Matteo Bruni later clarified that the pope supported "a stop to hostilities (and) a truce achieved with the courage of negotiations," rather than an outright Ukrainian surrender. Bruni said that the journalist interviewing Francis used the term "white flag" in the question that prompted the controversial remarks.

"I think that the strongest one is the one who looks at the situation, thinks about the people and has the courage of the white flag, and negotiates," Francis said, when asked to weigh in on the debate between those who say that Ukraine should agree to peace talks and those who argue that any negotiations would legitimize Moscow's aggression.

Kyiv remains firm on not engaging directly with Russia on peace talks, and Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy has said multiple times that the initiative in peace negotiations must come from the country that has been invaded.

Throughout the war, Francis has tried to maintain the Vatican's traditional diplomatic neutrality, but that has often been accompanied by apparent sympathy with the Russian rationale for invading Ukraine, such as when he noted that NATO was "barking at Russia's door" with its eastward expansion. The RSI interview appears to mark the first time when the pope publicly used terms such as "white flag" or "defeated" while discussing the war.

Moldova cites threats from Russia as it seeks to join EU

Associated Press

CHISINAU, Moldova — The past two years have been the hardest and most tumultuous for European Union candidate Moldova in more than three decades as it faces threats from Russia in multiple spheres of public life, the country's foreign minister says.

Since Russia invaded Ukraine in 2022, its neighbor Moldova has faced a litany of crises that have at times raised fears the country is also in Russia's crosshairs. These included errant missiles landing on its territory; a severe energy crisis after Moscow dramatically reduced gas supplies; rampant inflation; and protests by pro-Russia parties against the pro-Western government. Moldova has also taken in the highest number of Ukrainian refugees per capita of any country.

"This past two years without exaggeration have been by far the most difficult in the past 30 years," Mihai Popsoi, appointed foreign minister in late January, told The Associated Press in an interview.

Moldova gained independence from the Soviet Union in 1991, but Russia continues to see the country as within its sphere of influence.

Moldovan officials have repeatedly accused Russia of funding anti-government protests, meddling in local elections and running vast disinformation campaigns to try to derail Moldova from its path toward full EU membership. Russia has denied the accusations.

Biden: Netanyahu 'hurting Israel' in war actions

By ZEKE MILLER
Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — President Joe Biden said Saturday that he believes Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is "hurting Israel more than helping Israel" in how he is approaching its war against Hamas in Gaza

The U.S. leader expressed support for Israel's right to pursue Hamas after the Oct. 7 attack, but said of Netanyahu that "he must pay more attention to the innocent lives being lost as a consequence of the actions taken." Biden has for months warned that Israel risks losing international support over mounting civilian casualties in Gaza, and the latest remarks in an interview with MSNBC's Jonathan Capehart pointed to the increasingly strained relationship between the two leaders.

Biden said of the death toll in Gaza, "it's contrary to what Israel stands for. And I think it's a big mistake."

Biden said a potential Israeli invasion of the Gaza city of Rafah, where more than 1.3 million Palestinians are sheltering, is "a red line" for him, but said he would not cut off weapons like the Iron Dome missile interceptors which protect the Israeli civilian populace from rocket attacks in the region.

"It is a red line," he said, when asked about Rafah, "but I'm never going to leave Israel. The defense of Israel is still critical, so there's no red line I'm going to cut off all weapons so they don't have the Iron Dome to protect them."

Biden said he was willing to make his case directly to the Israeli Knesset, its parliament, including by making another trip to the country. He traveled to Israel weeks after the Oct. 7. attack. He declined to elaborate on how or whether such a trip might materialize.

The U.S. leader had hoped to secure a temporary cease-fire before Ramadan begins this week, though that appears increasingly unlikely as Hamas has balked at a deal pushed by the U.S. and its allies that would have seen fighting pause for about six weeks, the release of additional hostages held by Hamas and Palestinian prisoners held by Israel, and a surge in humanitarian aid into Gaza.

Israel remains committed to continuing its invasion and annihilating Hamas, which killed about 1,200 people in Israel and took about 250 hostages on Oct. 7. The militant group freed dozens of hostages during a November truce, but it refuses to release more without guarantees of a complete end of hostilities.

Meanwhile, more than 30,000 Palestinians have been killed in Gaza according to the Hamas-run health ministry, with the majority being women and children, and hundreds of thousands going hungry.

Biden noted CIA Director Bill Burns is in the region currently trying to resurrect the deal.

Biden's comments came after he was captured on a hot mic following Thursday night's State of the Union address telling Sen. Michael Bennet, D-Colo. that he and the Israeli leader will need to have a "come to Jesus meeting."

1,000 troops will deploy for temporary port ops near Gaza

By Corey Dickstein Stars and Stripes

The Pentagon will soon deploy about 1,000 American troops to build a temporary seaport just off the coast of war-torn Gazato provide its inhabitants some 2 million meals per day, a Defense Department spokesman said Friday.

The American troops will deploy a floating pier and a roughly 1,800-foot causeway in the Mediterranean Sea off Gaza's coast, where commercial vessels can dock and offload aid to be transported by smaller vessels and vehicles into Gaza, said Air Force Maj. Gen. Pat Ryder, the Pentagon's top spokesman.

The operation will use a makeshift dock known as a Joint Logistics Over-the-Shore, or JLOTS, and include Navy and Army personnel, Ryder said.

None of the American forces will enter Gaza at any time, including to deliver aid or build the temporary pier, he said at the Pentagon. Ryder said the pier should be operational within about 60 days.

"We're working to set this up as quickly as possible, but we expect that it will take several weeks to plan and execute," he said. "Once operational the actual amount of aid delivered will depend on many variables and will likely scale over time. However, we expect that deliveries via JLOTS could provide more than 2 million meals to the citizens of Gaza per day."

Not all the forces to be used in the operation had been selected as of Friday, Ryder said. However, the Army's 7th Transportation Brigade based at Joint Base Langley-Eustis in Virginia had already been notified it would be deployed, he said.

President Joe Biden announced Thursday during his State of the Union speech that he ordered the Pentagon to conduct the new aid mission. He also called on Israel to do more to protect civilians and ensure they receive humanitarian aid as the Israelis fight Hamas militants in the Palestinian enclave.

The U.N. said the roughly 2.3 million people in Gaza now face nearfamine conditions amid the fighting launched in the wake of Hamas mil $it ants' surprise \ as sault \ on \ Is rae lis \ on \ Oct. \ 7.$

Humanitarian aid has been slow getting into Gaza for reasons including blockades at land crossings and tight controls of aid trucks by Israel, which has accused Hamas of stealing humanitarian goods.

The U.S. in recent days has begun airdropping some humanitarian aid into Gaza via Air Force C-130s. The U.S. and Jordanian militaries airdropped about 11,500 meals into northern Gaza on Friday, according to U.S. Central Command, which oversees American military operations in the Middle East.

It was not clear Friday how much the new aid operations would cost U.S. taxpayers, Ryder said. The Navy will deploy the floating pier and causeway toward Gaza via ships, and soldiers and sailors will prepare them for use, Ryder said. Commercial vessels will be able to dock at the floating pier, where their cargo can be offloaded and reloaded onto smaller Navy logistics support vessels, he said.

Those Navy ships will then deliver the aid onto the causeway, where it will be loaded onto trucks that will drive it onto the beach in Gaza for delivery, Ryder said.

The aid will be driven into Gaza by vetted U.S. partners and not American troops, he said.

CENTCOM leader: US strikes deter actions of Iran proxies in Iraq, Syria

By Corey Dickstein Stars and Stripes

U.S. strikes in early February on Iranian proxies in the Middle East have deterred militant groups in Iraq and Syria from attacking American forces but have not been as effective against Houthi rebels in Yemen, the top U.S. general in the region said Thursday.

Iranian-backed militias in Iraq and Syria, including those responsible for the Jan. 28 drone attack in Jordan that killed three U.S. soldiers, have not fired at American troops in more than a month, Army Gen. Michael Erik Kurilla told the Senate Armed Services Committee. He credited the retaliatory strikes on some 85 targets in Iraq and Syria with restoring an informal cease-fire in those countries.

"Iran has to understand there are consequences to their actions. I think that on that last attack that we did ... our messaging matched our actions ... and I think that sent a very strong deterrent message, and we have not had an attack in 32 days in Iraq or Syria," said Kurilla, who leads U.S. Central Command and is responsible for American forces in the Middle East and central Asia. "But I will tell you deterrence is always temporary."

While violence has dropped in Iraq and Syria, it has increased off Yemen's coast. Repeated U.S. strikes on Houthi rebels in Yemen, who are also backed by Iran, have not deterred the group from its attacks on commercial and military vessels in the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden, Kurilla said.

Houthis target Singapore-flagged ship as US, allies shoot down their drones

Associated Press

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — An attack by Yemen's Houthi rebels set off explosions ahead of a Singapore-flagged vessel in the Gulf of Aden, authorities said, the latest in a campaign of assaults by the Iranian-backed group over Israel's war on Hamas in the Gaza Strip.

The attack on Friday targeted the bulk carrier Propel Fortune, which continued on its way, according to U.S. Central Command. "The missiles did not impact the vessel," the U.S. military said. "There were no injuries or damages reported."

The Houthis said Saturday they were behind the attack. Houthi military spokesman Brig. Gen. Yahya Saree claimed that along with targeting the Propel Fortune, the Houthi forces also launched 37 drones targeting American warships.

American officials said early Saturday that the U.S. Navy, allied warships and aircraft have shot down 15 bomb-carrying Houthi drones in the Gulf of Aden and the Red Sea.

Friday's attack on Propel Fortune came after a Houthi missile struck a commercial ship in the Gulf of Aden on Wednesday, killing three of its crew members and forcing survivors to abandon the vessel. That was the first fatal strike in the Houthis' campaign over the war in Gaza. The Houthis describe the attacks as trying to pressure Israel into stopping the war, but their targets increasingly have little or nothing to do with the conflict.

Biden, Trump issue dire warnings of the other

Associated Press

ATLANTA — President Joe Biden and former President Donald Trump warned of dire consequences for the country if the other wins another term in the White House as the pair held dueling rallies in Georgia Saturday fresh off strong wins in Super Tuesday contests that positioned them for an all-but-certain rematch this November.

The state was a pivotal 2020 battleground — so close four years ago that Trump finds himself indicted here for his push to "find 11,780 votes" and overturn Biden's victory — and both parties are preparing for another closely contested race in the state this year.

Biden opened his speech at a rally in Atlanta noting that Trump was across the state with Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene, the firebrand lawmaker who has gone from the fringes of her party to the fore. "It can tell you a lot about a person who he keeps company with," Biden said to applause. Biden noted that Trump had hosted Hungarian Prime Minister Viktor Orbán — who has rolled back democracy in his country — at his Florida club the day before.

"When he says he wants to be a dictator, I believe him," Biden said of Trump. "Our freedoms are literally on the ballot this November."

Biden hosted the rally at Pullman Yards, a 27-acre arts and entertainment venue in Atlanta that was formerly an industrial site to receive the endorsement of Collective PAC, Latino Victory Fund and AAPI Victory Fund, a trio of political groups representing, respectively, Black, Latino, and Asian Americans and Pacific Island voters. The groups were announcing a $30 million commitment to mobilize voters on Biden's behalf

Trump, meanwhile, hammered Biden on the border and blamed him for the death of 22-year-old Georgia nursing student Laken Riley last month. An immigrant from Venezuela who entered the U.S. illegally has been arrested and charged with her murder. He hosted Riley's family at his rally in Rome, Greene's hometown.

"What Joe Biden has done on our border is a crime against humanity and the people of this nation for which he will never be forgiven," Trump said, promising the largest deportation in history. "What a tremendous shame," he said.

Ahead of his rally, Biden expressed regret for using the term "illegal" during his State of the Union address to describe Riley's suspected killer, drawing more criticism from Trump's team.

Trump, who took the stage at the same moment Biden was still speaking at another part of the state, skewered the president for the apology and said, "Are we going crazy?"

"I say he was an illegal alien. He was an illegal immigrant. He was an illegal migrant. And he shouldn't have been in our country and he never would have been under the Trump policy," he said to loud cheers.

Trump also highlighted the very things Biden knocked him for, saying that he "had dinner last night with a great gentleman from Hungary, Viktor Orbán" and praised Greene for yelling at Biden during his State of the Union about Riley, calling her "very brave."

Trump's rally opened with a message asking attendees to rise to support the hundreds of people serving jail time for their roles in the Jan. 6 Capitol insurrection, when thousands of pro-Trump supporters tried to overturn the 2020 presidential election by halting the counting of Electoral College votes.

The intensity of the rhetoric presaged a grueling eight months of campaigning ahead in the state.

"We're a true battleground state now," said U.S. Rep. Nikema Williams, an Atlanta Democrat who is also state party chairwoman.

Trump, while repeating his lies about the 2020 election on Saturday, declared, "With your vote, we are going to win the state of Georgia in an epic landslide."

Once a Republican stronghold, Georgia is now so competitive that neither party can agree on how to describe today's divide. A "52-48 state," said Republican Gov. Brian Kemp, whose party controls state government. "We're not blue, we're not red," Williams countered, but "periwinkle," a claim she supports with Biden's 2020 win and the two Democratic senators, Raphael Warnock and Jon Ossoff, Georgia sent to Washington.

There is agreement, at least, that Biden and Trump each have a path to victory — and plenty of obstacles along the way.

"Biden's numbers are in the tank for a lot of good reasons, and we can certainly talk about that. And so, it makes it where Trump absolutely can win the race," Kemp said at a recent forum sponsored by Punchbowl News. "I also think he could lose the race. I think it's going to be a lot tougher than people realize."

Biden's margin was about a quarter of a percentage point in 2020. Warnock won his 2022 Senate runoff by 3 points. Kemp was elected in 2018 by 1.5 percentage points but expanded his 2022 reelection margin to 7.5 points, a blowout in a battleground state.

In each of those elections, Democrats held wide advantages in the core of metro Atlanta, where Biden was Saturday. Democrats also performed well in Columbus and Savannah and a handful of rural, majority-Black counties. But Republicans dominated in other rural areas, small towns and the smallest cities — like Rome.

At Trump's rally, at a city in the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains, more than 3,000 people packed inside an event center Saturday to hear the former president speak. His campaign handed out signs featuring the image of Laken Riley.

Candace Duvall, from Hampton, Ga., wearing a white "Trump 2024," T-shirt, a gold purse that said "Trump" and a pair of earrings that said "Never surrender" on one earring and Trump's mugshot on the other, declared that her candidate is "going to save this country."

She faulted Biden for fumbling the pronunciation of Riley's name during his State of the Union speech Thursday.

"That happened right here in Georgia. That hits home for us. We know why that happened. We know why," she said, adding that there were too many migrants coming into the country.

Duvall said she thinks Trump is winning over voters who didn't like him before "because they see the difference now" with Biden.

"If somebody gives you sirloin and then they take it away and give you a hamburger, you're going to want sirloin again," she said.

Biden signs $460B funding package, averts shutdown

Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON — President Joe Biden signed into law a $460 billion package to fund part of the U.S. government until September, finalizing legislation that averts a partial government shutdown.

The package sets spending for about a quarter of agency funding through September, including the departments of Commerce, Justice, Transportation, Energy and Veterans Affairs.

Funding for other parts of the government is set to expire on March 22, creating the next dead-

The next round of negotiations is expected to include money for the Defense and Homeland Security departments, which has sparked tensions between parties as Republicans demand strict border legislation.

Biden says he'll sign proposed TikTok ban

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Joe Biden on Friday endorsed legislation that could lead to the popular video-sharing app TikTok being banned in the United States, a move that comes amid growing concern in Washington about keeping Americans' data out of China's hands.

The legislation that passed through the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee unanimously on Thursday calls on China's ByteDance to divest its ownership of TikTok — or effectively face a U.S. ban. Republican House

Speaker Mike Johnson also supports the bill and has indicated it would soon come up for a full vote in the House.

"If they pass it, I'll sign it," Biden said

The White House had provided technical support in the drafting of the bill, though White House press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said last week the TikTok legislation "still needs some work" to get to a place where Biden would endorse it.

Former President Donald Trump, the likely Republican nominee, came out in a Truth Social post on Thursday saying he opposed a ban because it would help rival social media platform Facebook.

Trump's opposition to the legislation comes after he issued — and then rescinded — an executive action late in his presidency intended to ban TikTok and another popular app, WeChat.

Trump's pushback puts him on the opposite side of the debate of powerful Republicans, including Johnson and Republican House Majority Leader Steve Scalise, who has called the legislation a "critical national security bill." STARS AND STRIPES Monday, March 11, 2024

DOJ opens criminal probe of blowout on 737 Max plane

The Washington Post

The Justice Department is looking into the Jan. 5 blowout of a portion of the fuselage of a Boeing 737 Max jetliner operated by Alaska Airlines, according to two people briefed on the matter.

Federal prosecutors have interviewed several witnesses in connection with the criminal investigation, including the pilots and aircrew of the Alaska flight, according to two individuals who spoke on the condition of anonymity because they are not authorized to speak publicly about the probe. A grand jury has been convened to examine evidence, one person said.

Boeing declined to comment. A Justice Department spokesman also declined to comment. Alaska Airlines said in a statement Saturday that it was cooperating with the investigation.

"In an event like this, it's normal for the DOJ to be conducting an investigation," Alaska Airlines said. "We are fully cooperating and do not believe we are a target of the investigation."

Spirit AeroSystems, a Boeing supplier that initially installed a panel that came off the jet in midair, said it has received requests for information from "multiple government agencies" and was cooperating with ongoing investigations.

The inquiry comes as an audit

by the Federal Aviation Administration identified multiple instances where Boeing failed to comply with quality control requirements in its manufacturing process, an unwelcome reminder of safety problems that led to a 20-month grounding of the fleet following two fatal crashes involving 737 Max 8 jetliners in 2018 and 2019.

The Justice Department is investigating whether any factors that contributed to the Jan. 5 incident violated the terms of an earlier agreement with Boeing to resolve any criminal liability for the two crashes involving 737 Max jets, according to a person familiar with the probe.

Boeing reached that deal with the Justice Department in 2021 over employees' concealment of a critical safety flaw implicated in crashes that killed 346 people in Ethiopia and Indonesia. Boeing agreed to pay more than $2.5 billion in penalties and admitted that two of its technical pilots deceived federal safety regulators about a software system blamed for the accidents.

As part of the agreement, Boeing would avoid criminal prosecution if it met other conditions for a period of three years, including promptly reporting any evidence that its employees or agents committed fraud against any government agencies, regulators or its customers.

Job seeker Johannes Oveida looks over a brochure at a job fair at Lehigh Carbon Community College in Allentown, Pa., on Thursday.

Another burst of hiring shows off resilience of the US job market

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's employers delivered another healthy month of hiring in February, adding a surprising 275,000 jobs and again showcasing the U.S. economy's resilience in the face of high interest rates.

Last month's job growth marked an increase from a revised gain of 229,000 jobs in January. At the same time, the unemployment rate ticked up twotenths of a point in February to 3.9%. Though that was the highest rate in two years, it is still low by historic standards. And it marked the 25th straight month in which joblessness has remained below 4%—the longest such streak since the 1960s.

Yet despite sharply lower inflation, a healthy job market and a record-high stock market, many Americans say they are unhappy with the state of the economy — a sentiment that is sure to weigh on President Joe Biden's bid for reelection. Many voters blame Biden for the surge in consumer prices that began in 2021. Though inflationary pressures have significantly eased, average prices remain about 17% above where they stood three years ago.

Friday's report gave the inflation fighters at the Federal Reserve some encouraging news: Average hourly wages rose just 0.1% from January, the smallest monthly gain in more than two years, and 4.3% from a year earlier, less than expected. Average pay growth has been exceeding inflation for more than year, but when it rises too fast it can feed inflation. The latest figures reflected the job market's sustained ability to withstand the 11 rate hikes the Fed imposed in its drive against inflation, which made borrowing much costlier for households and businesses. Employers have continued to hire briskly to meet steady demand from consumers across the economy.

The February figures will likely make Fed officials more comfortable about cutting rates sometime in the coming months. With December and January job gains revised sharply down, wage growth easing and the unemployment rate up, the Fed's policymakers aren't likely to worry about an overheating economy. Most economists and Wall Street traders expect the first rate cut to come in June. The Fed stopped raising rates in July and has signaled that it envisions three rate cuts this year.

The unemployment rate rose last month in part because more people began looking for a job and didn't immediately find one. The Fed could be reassured by the influx of job seekers, which typically makes it easier for businesses to fill jobs without having to significantly raise pay.

Gus Faucher, chief economist at PNC Financial Services, said he was impressed by the breadth of hiring last month: Among industries, health care companies added 67,000 jobs, government at all levels 52,000, restaurants and bars 42,000, construction companies 23,000 and retailers 19,000.

When the Fed began aggressively raising rates in March 2022 to fight the worst bout of inflation in four decades, a painful recession was widely predicted, with waves of layoffs and high unemployment. The Fed boosted its benchmark rate to the highest level in more than two decades.

Inflation has eased, more or less steadily, in response: Consumer prices in January were up just 3.1% from a year earlier — way down from a year-over-year peak of 9.1% in 2022.

ALS drug maker: Study says therapy failed to help

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The maker of a much-debated drug for Lou Gehrig's disease said Friday its therapy failed to help patients in a large follow-up study, but stopped short of committing to follow through on a prior pledge to pull the drug from the U.S. market.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Amylyx Pharmaceuticals' Relyvrio in September 2022, following a years-long advocacy campaign by patients with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or ALS, a fatal muscle-wasting dis-

Amylyx said Friday it would discuss its plans for Relyvrio with patients and the FDA, which "may include voluntarily withdrawing" the drug. Executives said in a statement they were "surprised and disappointed" by the results and hoped to announce their plans in the next two months.

The latest company study showed that the drug did not slow the disease compared with a dummy treatment. The drug also failed to show improvement on any secondary measures, such as muscle

Amylyx's medication is part of a string of drugs for deadly, degenerative diseases that have won FDA approval in recent years despite questionable proof that they

The 2022 approval was mainly based on results from one small, mid-stage study that was criticized by some of the agency's own internal scientists. An outside committee of experts also voted against the drug initially, before being swayed to back it at a followup meeting requested by patients.

OpenAI has 'full confidence' in Altman

Associated Press

OpenAI is reinstating CEO Sam Altman to its board of directors and said it has "full confidence" in his leadership after the conclusion of an outside investigation into the company's turmoil.

The ChatGPT maker tapped the law firm WilmerHale to look into what led the company to abruptly fire Altman in November, only to rehire him days later. After months of investigation, it found that Altman's ouster was a "consequence of a breakdown in the relationship and loss of trust" between him and the prior board, OpenAI said in a summary of the findings Friday. It did not release the full

"I'm pleased this whole thing is over," Altman told reporters Friday, adding that he's been disheartened to see "people with an agenda" leaking information to try to harm the company. At the same time, he said he's learned from the experience and apologized for a dispute with a former board member.

Illegal homemade machine guns fuel surge in shootings

By Lindsay Whitehurst Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Eleven-yearold Domonic Davis was not far from his mom's Cincinnati home when a hail of gunfire sprayed out from a passing car. Nearly two dozen rounds hurtled through the night at a group of children in the blink of an

Four other children and a woman were hurt in the November shooting that killed Domonic, who had just made his school basketball team.

"What happened? How does this happen to an 11-year-old? He was only a few doors down," his father, Issac Davis, said.

The shooting remains under investigation. But federal investigators believe the 22 shots could be fired off with lightning speed because the weapon had been illegally converted to fire like a machine gun.

Communities around the U.S. have seen shootings carried out with weapons converted to fully automatic in recent years, fueled by a staggering increase in small pieces of metal or plastic made with a 3D printer or ordered online. Laws against machine guns date back to the bloody violence of Prohibitionera gangsters. But the proliferation of devices known by nicknames such as Glock switches, auto sears and chips has allowed people to transform legal semi-automatic weapons into even more dangerous guns, helping fuel gun violence, police and federal authorities said.

"Police officers are facing down fully automatic weapon fire in amounts that haven't existed in this country since the days of Al Capone and the Tommy gun," said Steve Dettelbach, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives. "It's a huge problem."

The agency reported a 570% increase in the number of conversion devices collected by police departments between 2017 and 2021, the most recent data available.

Guns with conversion devices have been used in several mass shootings, including one that left four dead at a Sweet Sixteen party in Alabama last year and another that left six people dead at a bar district in Sacramento, Calif., in 2022. In Houston, police officer William Jeffrey died in 2021 after being shot with a converted gun while serving a warrant. In cities such as Indianapolis, police have seized them every week.

The devices that can convert legal semi-automatic weapons can be made on a 3D printer in about 35 minutes or ordered from overseas online for less than $30. They're also quick to install. Once in place, they modify the gun's machinery. Instead of firing one round each time the shooter squeezes the trigger, a semi-automatic weapon with a conversion device starts firing as soon as the trigger goes down and doesn't stop until the shooter lets go or the weapon runs out of ammunition.

"You're seeing them a lot in stunning numbers, particularly in street violence," said David Pucino, deputy chief counsel at Giffords Law Center.

In a demonstration by ATF agents, the firing of a semi-automatic outfitted with a conversion device was nearly indistinguishable from an automatic weapon. Conversion devices with differing designs can fit a range of different guns, enabling guns to fire at a rate of 800 or more bullets per minute, according to the ATF.

"It takes two or three seconds to put in some of these devices into a firearm to make that firearm into a machine gun instantly," Dettelbach

Between 2012 and 2016, police departments in the U.S. found 814 conversion devices and sent them to the ATF. That number grew to more than 5,400 between 2017 and 2021, according to the agency's most recent data.

They took hold in Minneapolis in 2021, and helped fuel record-breaking gun violence that year, said police Chief Brian O'Hara. Along with spraying out bullets at a dizzying speed, switches make a gun more difficult for the shooter to control, so more people can be hit by accident.

"The thing is shaking as it's firing, so we wind up getting multiple victims, people hit in extremities during the same shooting incident, because the person cannot control the weapon," O'Hara said.

While the devices are considered illegal machine guns under federal law, many states don't have their own specific laws against them. In Indiana, police were finding them so often—multiple times a week in the state's capital — that the state changed the law to ensure it included switches.

But long before any prosecution, police have to find the conversion devices. Often about the size of a quarter, they can easily go unnoticed by the untrained eye after being installed, said Dettelbach.

Davis struggles to talk about the loss of his son. Domonic would often come with his dad on Fridays to get a haircut at the barber shop where Issac Davis works. He hopes to start a foundation called For Every Eleven to fight gun violence and honor his son's memory.

"I still want to keep his name going," he said. "He deserved to be still relevant. So I have to keep going. No matter how much grief I grieve him in private."

Prosecutor quits after rebuke over conjugal visits for informants

By Joshua Goodman

Associated Press

MIAMI — A veteran prosecutor in Miami has resigned after a judge found that state investigators manipulated witnesses, including possibly providing conjugal visits to jailhouse informants in exchange for their testimony, in a high-profile death penalty case against a notorious gang leader.

During his career Michael Von Zamft has led some of the biggest murder, conspiracy and racketeering cases in the Florida state attorney's office in Miami and at times served as a trainer and supervisor to younger prosecutors.

He resigned last week following a stunning rebuke by the judge, who disqualified him and another prosecutor, Stephen Mitchell, from the resentencing trial of gang leader and convicted murderer Corey Smith.

Judge Andrea Ricker Wolfson said she found evidence of "witness testimony manipulation" and "severe recklessness" by prosecutors stretching back to the case's origins 24 years ago and continuing to the present.

State Attorney Katherine Fernandez Rundle said Friday that she accepted the resignation of Von Zamft, her colleague of almost 30 years, and reaffirmed her commitment that all prosecutors seek "truth and justice" lawfully and with

"honesty, integrity and professionalism."

Her office did not respond to questions by The Associated Press about whether she had initiated any discipline actions against the prosecution team behind the case or filed a complaint to the Florida Bar.

"I will ask my top litigators to examine every aspect of this case and determine the best path forward," Rundle said in a statement, in which she also defended the decision to seek the death penalty for Smith.

Von Zamft declined to comment. Among the irregularities the judge found was testimony from inmates who said they were granted favors including conjugal visits when they were brought to the Miami Police Department's Homicide Unit to coordinate their testimony against Smith as state witnesses.

But the most damaging allegations against Von Zamft came from recordings of his conversations with an inmate in which, in anticipation of the resentencing trial, he discussed arranging jailhouse meetings among several witnesses so they can coordinate their testimony—something Smith's lawyers were never told, as is required in criminal prosecutions. In a 2022 phone call, Von Zamft also discussed sidelining another witness whose version of events had shifted over the years, saying that if she didn't testify as he wanted, "I will find a way to make her unavailable" and read her previous testimony into the record.

Smith was an alleged leader of what's known as the John Doe Gang, a drug organization that sold marijuana and crack cocaine in a poor, predominantly Black neighborhood of Miami in the late 1990s. His conviction in 2004 in the killing of four individuals was touted at the time as a major victory against gangs.

Smith was sentenced to death for two of the killings on the recommendation of a majority of jury members, but in 2017 state law changed to require a unanimous vote in capital punishment cases. As a result the death sentence was vacated.

WWII vet to get married near D-Day beaches

By Terry Spencer

Associated Press

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Harold Terens and his fiancee Jeanne Swerlin kissed and held hands like high school sweethearts as they discussed their upcoming wedding in France, a country the World War II veteran first visited as a 20-year-old U.S. Army Air Forces corporal shortly after D-Day.

Terens, a gregarious and energetic 100-year-old, will be honored in June by the French as part of the 80th anniversary celebration of their country's liberation from the Nazis.

Then he plans to marry the sprightly 96-year-old Swerlin in a town near the beaches where U.S. troops landed.

"I love this girl — she is quite special," said Terens, who has been dating Swerlin since 2021. To demonstrate their fondness for dancing, they had Siri play "Uptown Funk" by Mark Ronson and Bruno Mars and then jumped, twisted and gyrated like teens at homecoming.

"He's an amazing guy, amazing," Swerlin said. "He loves me so much and he says it."

"And my god, he's the greatest kisser," she said.

The couple, who are each widowed, grew up in New York City: her in Brooklyn, him in the Bronx. They laugh at how differently they experienced World War II. She was in high school and dated soldiers who gave her war souvenirs like dog tags, knives and even a gun, trying to impress.

WILFREDO LEE/AP

World War II veteran Harold Terens, 100, right, and Jeanne Swerlin, 96, share a laugh as they speak during an interview, Feb. 29, in Boca Raton, Fla.

Terens enlisted in 1942 and shipped to Great Britain the following year, attached to a four-pilot P-47 Thunderbolt fighter squadron as their radio repair technician. Terens said his original pilots all died in the war.

"I loved all those guys. Young men. The average age was 26," he said.

On D-Day — June 6, 1944 — Terens helped repair planes returning from France so they could rejoin the battle. He said half his company's pilots died that day.

He married his wife Thelma in 1948 and they had two daughters and a son. He became a U.S. vice president for a British conglomerate. They moved from New York to Florida in 2006 after Thelma retired as a French teacher; she died in 2018 after 70 years of marriage. He has eight grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

Swerlin married at 21 and was a full-time mom to two girls and a boy before being widowed in her

40s. Her second husband died after 18 years of marriage. She then lived with Sol Katz for 25 years before his death in 2019. She has seven grandchildren and seven greatgrandchildren.

It was Katz's daughter, Joanne Schosheim, who introduced her to Terens in 2021.

She met Terens when her children attended camp with his grandchildren years ago and remained friends. She and a friend thought the two might hit it off, so invited them to lunch.

"She gave my dad such joy," Schosheim said of Swerlin. "I didn't want her to be lonely."

But after Thelma's death, Terens wasn't interested in other women and barely noticed Swerlin

"I didn't even look at her. I didn't even talk to her," he said.

"I looked at him. He looked at me," Swerlin said, but "it was like nothing."

Even so, Terens' buddy Stanley Eisenberg took them to dinner the next night. Eisenberg wanted to see who his friend had dismissed.

It was love at second sight.

"I had never seen him lit up like that," Eisenberg said.

The couple and their families will head to Paris in late May, where Terens and a handful of surviving World War II veterans will be honored. Of the 16 million American WWII veterans, only 120,000 remain, the government says.

It will be Terens' fourth D-Day celebration in France. He received a medal from President Emmanuel Macron five years ago.

The families then will travel to the town of Carentan-les-Marais, where the couple plan to be married June 8 by Mayor Jean-Pierre Lhonneur in a chapel built in the 1600s.

Lhonneur explained legally he is only allowed to marry town residents, but he thinks the local prosecutor will let him make an exception.

"It will be a pleasure for us," the mayor said.

Time of confusion for Navajo, Hopi as US springs forward

By TERRY TANG

Associated Press

TUBA CITY, Ariz. — Melissa Blackhair was not eager to spring forward Sunday.

"I'm dreading it. I just don't want to see how much we have to adjust," Blackhair said while sitting in her home office in Tuba City on the Navajo Nation, the only area in Arizona that follows daylight saving time. With her husband working during the week in Phoenix, their clocks will vary.

"Everything in our house is set to daylight saving time. It just kind of is an inconvenience because I am having to remember which car is on daylight and which is on standard time," she said. "My husband will not change our time in our apartment (in Phoenix)."

Those who live on the Arizona portion of the Navajo Nation—the largest Native American reservation in the U.S.—endure mindbending calculations every March through November.

The Navajo Nation, which also stretches into Utah and New Mexico, will reset clocks for one hour later despite being situated between two territories that remain on standard time: the rest of Arizona and the neighboring Hopi reservation.

It's made for an especially unique situation with the Hopi reservation, which is landlocked within the Navajo Nation and goes by standard time year-round. A stretch of U.S. 160 in Tuba City is the de facto border between the two reservations and two time expected Sunday to be chaotic. Despite posting reminders in the locker room, she expected employees who live on both reservations to arrive late.

Tourists might not be aware. Guests staying at the Moenkopi Legacy Inn & Suites on the Hopi side across the street who come into the grocery store at what they think is 8:30 p.m. would have only 30 minutes to shop before it closes, Hoover said.

"In reality, it probably would be a lot easier for everybody if we all stayed on the same time. But I take it as being unique," Hoover said. "Where else can you say that? 'Oh they're on a different time across the street.'"

Deannethea Long, the hotel's general manager, agrees it makes for an interesting talking point with guests. The hotel, which is on standard time, does little things like have one wall clock per time zone in the lobby.

"We have in-room notices to know when stores close, understanding your time zones. We explain it at the front desk, too. It can get very confusing," Long said.

Gunmen kidnap 300 students in northwest Nigeria

Associated Press

KURIGA, Nigeria — Rashidat Hamza is in despair. All but one of her six children are among the nearly 300 students abducted from their school in Nigeria's northwest, riddled with Islamic extremists and armed gangs.

It has been more than two days after her children — ages 7 to 18 went to school in the remote town of Kuriga in Kaduna state only to be kidnapped by gunmen. She was still in shock Saturday.

Authorities said at least 100 children aged 12 or younger were among the abductees in the state known for violent killings lawlessness and dangerous roads where people get regularly snatched.

"We don't know what to do, but we believe in God." Hamza told

The Associated Press during a visit to the town.

The mass kidnapping in Kuriga was the third in northern Nigeria since last week; a group of gunmen abducted 15 children from a school in another northwestern state, Sokoto, before dawn Saturday, and a few days earlier 200 people, mostly women and children displaced by conflict, were kidnapped in northeastern Borno

No group claimed responsibility for any of the recent abductions. But Islamic extremists waging an insurgency in the northeast are suspected of carrying out the kidnapping in Borno. Locals blame the school abductions on herders who are in conflict with the settled communities.

Keeping the legacy alive
People dance near a giant papier-mache bull stuffed with fireworks as roman candles and bottle rockets shower them with sparks, during the annual festival honoring Saint John of God, in Tultepec, Mexico, on Friday. Every year, in the first week of March, hundreds of giant papier-mache bulls stuffed with fireworks are erected in the front yards of Tultepec. The celebration, now its 35th year, pays homage to the patron saint of the poor and sick, St. John of God, who the fireworks' producers view as a protective figure. The festivities are a way for the town of Tultepec, just north of Mexico City, to keep their craft alive and draw people to the town after a massive, devastating explosion at workshops in 2018 killed 25 people and wounded twice that number.

Bill would apply 'stand your ground' to bears

TALLAHASSEE — So long as they don't eat them, stuff them or turn them into hats for the British royal guard, Florida residents will be allowed to kill black bears threatening them on their property with no consequences under a bill sent to Republican Gov. Ron DeSantis on Thursday.

The once-threatened Florida black bear population has increasingly wandered into neighborhoods and private property, especially in more rural areas of north and central Florida. The legislation is similar to the "stand your ground" law that allows people to use deadly force against other people threatening them.

Supporters say Floridians have the right to defend themselves, their families, pets and property against bears coming around looking for food. But opponents fear people will become trigger happy and not take other precautions against bears.

Xcel Energy admits role in igniting large wildfire

CANADIAN — The utility provider Xcel Energy said Thursday that its facilities appeared have played a role in igniting a massive wildfire in the Texas Panhandle that grew to the largest blaze in state history.

Texas officials have said they are still investigating the cause of the fire that has burned nearly 1,700 square miles and destroyed hundreds of structures. The Minnesota-based company said in a statement that it disputes claims that "it acted negligently" in maintaining and operating infrastructure.

"Based on currently available information, Xcel Energy acknowledges that its facilities appear to have been involved in an ignition of the Smokehouse Creek fire," the company said in a state-

Bill to criminalize death of 'unborn person' OK'd

DES MOINES — Republicans in Iowa's House of Representatives approved a bill Thursday that would criminalize the death of an "unborn person" over Democrats' concerns about how it might apply to in vitro fertilization, after an Alabama court found frozen embryos can be considered children

Iowa's law currently outlines penalties for termination or serious injury to a "human pregnancy," but the proposed bill would amend the language to pertain to "causing of death of, or serious injury to, an unborn person," defined as "an individual organism ... from fertilization to live birth."

City council to change locks on perk apartment

NEW ORLEANS — The New Orleans City Council voted Thursday to change the locks on a coveted city-owned apartment in its latest dispute with Mayor LaToya Cantrell, whose use of the French Quarter property drew scrutiny and figured in a failed recall effort.

The newly flaring dispute centers on one of 50 units in the 19thcentury building known as the Upper Pontalba. It's steps away from the Mississippi River and, along with St. Louis Cathedral, is among five historic structures bordering the green space known as Jackson

Previous mayors have said they had used the apartment for meetings, special events or to house visiting dignitaries. She suggested the matter would be unflattering to Crumbley and urged both sides to simply agree to an order and avoid a public airing.

Judge: Rail firm alone should pay for cleanup

EAST PALESTINE — Norfolk Southern alone will be responsible for paying for the cleanup after last year's fiery train derailment in eastern Ohio, a federal judge ruled.

The decision issued Wednesday threw out the railroad's claim that the companies that made chemicals that spilled and owned tank cars that ruptured should share the cost of the cleanup.

An assortment of chemicals spilled and caught fire after the train derailed in East Palestine, Ohio, on Feb. 3, 2023. Three days later, officials blew open five tank cars filled with vinyl chloride because they feared those cars might explode. Residents still worry about potential health consequences from those chemicals.

The Atlanta-based railroad has said the ongoing cleanup from the derailment has already cost it more than $1.1 billion. That total continues to grow, though EPA officials have said they expect the cleanup to be finished at some point later this year.

Cruise employee accused of hiding camera on ship

FORT LAUDERDALE A Royal Caribbean cruise employee is accused of hiding cameras inside bathrooms of passenger cabins to spy on guests, including underage girls.

Arvin Joseph Mirasol, 34, was arrested last week on federal charges of production and possession of child sexual abuse material after the Symphony of the Seas arrived in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., according to a probable cause affidavit filed in the U.S. District Court of Florida. A guest staying in a cabin where Mirasol was an attendant found a camera in the bathroom Feb. 25. It was "affixed to the counter underneath the sink," according to the affidavit.

She reported it to ship officials, who sent security to the room to investigate.

Actor-singer Luke Grimes poses for a portrait on Feb. 20 in Nashville. The longtime musician dropped "Luke Grimes" on March 8.

'Yellowstone' star Luke Grimes ready to reintroduce himself on debut country album

By Maria Sherman

Associated Press

here are countless reasons to self-title an album: It can be an introduction, an assertion of some definitive work, an easy avenue to labeling a collection of songs that feel otherwise impossible to classify. In the case of Luke Grimes, best-known for his portrayal of the complex cowboy Kayce Dutton on the hit show "Yellowstone," it is also an invaluable tool.

Grimes' debut country album, "Luke Grimes," released March 8, is a declaration that speaks volumes: Think you know him? Guess again.

From a Nashville studio, the actor-musician told The Associated Press that he hopes his album establishes "who I am, and where this music is coming from — and I'm trying to be honest here; I'm trying to do this the right way."

"Country music is at its greatest, I think, when it's really honest. So that was important to try to accomplish on this first album," he

That personal vulnerability differs from his job as an actor on "Yellowstone."

"The other thing that I do is to very much not be myself," he says. "To do that correctly is to take on a different persona, a different name, to say someone else's words, and in a lot of cases, someone else's clothes. The whole point is to escape who you really are and to make someone believe who you're not."

Though this is Grimes' debut album, he's no novice. Music has always been a part of his life — from listening to worship music and playing drums in church at age 11 to discovering the outlaw greats through his dad and on country radio, his first taste of secular music.

Later, he'd play drums in a Wilco-inspired Americana band in Los Angeles, and in 2012, write a country song for the film "Outlaw Country," which he also acted in.

"I've never not played music," he says. "I always have a guitar. It keeps me inspired, too. And any time I've prepared to do anything creatively, music has been a huge part of that."

Produced by the legendary Dave Cobb, "Luke Grimes" is diaristic at times, an open-book record with songs about love, loss, God and rural living, universal topics from an artist with a knack for articulating truths, warts and all. Take "Oh, Ohio," for example.

Grimes says there are a lot of songs about love, heartbreak and hometowns in country

"If you go get famous making ketchup, it's hard to turn around and make mustard and have everybody take you seriously, you know? But he's great."

Aaron Raitiere

songwriter who contributed to "Luke Grimes"

music, and "Oh Ohio" accomplishes all of that while flipping the common conceit on its head: It's not so flattering about where he comes from

"I didn't maybe feel like I totally belonged there," he said of his home state. "I just hadn't heard that in a lot of songs. Usually when you hear songs about people's hometown, it's kind of a love letter. And this was more of a breakup Aaron Raitiere, a songwriter for Cobb who contributed to two songs on the album — the slow-burn highway ballad "South on 75" and the Western stomp "Ain't Dead Yet" — says Grimes is a "musician in his soul."

"He may very well be one of the best songwriter/singer/performers of our generation, trapped in a superstar actor's body," Raitiere said. "If you go get famous making ketchup, it's hard to turn around and make mustard and have everybody take you seriously, you know? But he's great."

On the upbeat "Ain't Dead Yet," with its sing-along chorus, clap-a-long percussion, campfire harmonica and hazy guitar pedals, Grimes demonstrates a kind of creative range associated with artists in their veterancy.

"We were saying, 'Wouldn't it be funny to write a song, just as an exercise, if (Nirvana front man) Kurt Cobain was country? Like, if he would have been born in a holler in Kentucky somewhere and hadn't died early and lived to be an old man and had a wife and kids, like, what would those songs sound like? And that literally was how that idea started," Grimes says. It's impossible not to hear the connection in the opening power chords.

"That's kind of the magical part of the whole process, that there are no rules," says Grimes.

The other magic? Getting to reveal more about himself to his listeners — and, in the process, connect with them.

"Certain albums that have stuck with me through the years, it's just kind of made me feel like there's someone out there that I can relate to," he says. "Whatever this feeling or emotion is that I don't know how to articulate, someone else has articulated it really well and through music, and in a way that I feel like a connection to. And so, if I could just do that for some people, then I think that'd be mission accomplished."

Influential 'Dragon Ball' creator dies

Associated Press

Akira Toriyama, the creator of the bestselling "Dragon Ball" and other popular anime who influenced Japanese comics, has died, his studio said Friday. He was 68.

Toriyama's "Dragon Ball" manga series, which started in 1984, has sold millions of copies globally and was adapted into hugely popular animated TV shows, video games and films.

Toriyama died March 1 of a blood clot in his brain, Bird Studio said in a statement.

"He was working enthusiastically on many projects, and there was still much he was looking forward to accomplishing," the studio wrote.

A new TV adaptation of Toriyama's "Sand Land," a desert adventure story released in 2000 and later adapted into a 2023 anime movie, is due to be released on Disney+ in the spring.

Messages of condolences and grief from fellow creators and fans filled social media.

Eiichiro Oda, creator of the blockbuster manga "One Piece," said Toriyama's presence was like a "big tree" to younger artists.

"He showed us all these things manga can do, a dream of going to another world," Oda said in a statement. His death leaves "a hole too big to fill," Oda added.

Born in Aichi prefecture, Japan, in 1955, Toriyama made his manga debut in 1978 with the adventure comic "Wonder Island."

His "Dr. Slump" series, which Toriyama started in 1980, was his first major hit.

"Dragon Ball," the story of a boy named Son Goku and his quest for seven magical balls that can make wishes come true, has sold 260 million copies altogether, according to the studio.

Toriyama also designed characters for the Dragon Quest video game series. He received awards in the manga industry and beyond, including France's Knight of the Order of Arts and Letters.

An amped-up Biden plays the age-old hits

By David Von Drehle

here's no need, and rarely much excuse, for State of the Union speeches. The Constitution mandates that the president make periodic reports on the subject to Congress, but for much of our history, the reports were printed on paper and read at leisure. Somehow, Americans got by without self-aggrandizing rhetoric, without feel-good guests waving from the galleries, without performative ovations. No catcalls, no members of Congress snapping selfies, no theatrical rending of paper by a House speaker. Bliss.

By the low standards of this unfortunate annual exercise, however, Thursday's address was noteworthy. There were at least three reasons for watching. First, the world is in flux; in places, it's in flames. Serious people wanted to hear President Joe Biden tell us how he thinks about this and what he intends to do.

On that score, it was a mediocre speech. Biden opened strong, by connecting today's crisis to the moment in 1941 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt accurately warned Congress of the price of isolationism. "If anybody in this room thinks [Russian President Vladimir] Putin will stop at Ukraine, I assure you he will not," Biden said with a steely eye for the House Republicans who are blocking aid to Ukraine. And he properly tagged "my predecessor" — a term he used rather than speak the name Donald Trump—for "bowing down to a Russian leader."

But Biden moved away quickly from the world, and only returned to it at the end of his speech, long after the eardrums began to harden to his relentless fortissimo. Biden has only two notes in his oratorical scale: loud and a couple of pals talking. He was right about China, saying that conventional wisdom about

America falling behind has "got it wrong." And he grappled with the Gaza crisis—a political nightmare fueled by Israel's pro-Trump leader — by announcing an intervention to open a pier for humanitarian aid. Both messages arrived late as throwaways. Hard to imagine that any love for the Biden foreign policy was born despite the urgency of the hour.

The second reason to listen was timing. The speech came immediately after Super Tuesday, when the dreary prospect of a Biden-Trump rematch became, it seems, inevitable.

As an overture to the general election, Biden's speech was stunningly aggressive. He punched his, uh, "predecessor" in the rhetorical nose immediately and kept jabbing. In the process, Biden previewed his themes. He will run on amped-up versions of age-old issues. "Those bragging about overturning Roe v. Wade have no clue about the electoral power of women," Biden declared, with equal contempt for Trump and his Supreme Court appointees.

After abortion rights came the Democratic evergreen of health care reform. "We finally beat Big Pharma," he declared. Elect him again and he will pursue price caps for "500 drugs over the next decade." The cost of all prescription drugs could be capped "at $2,000 per year for everyone," he offered. And how about $400 per month to ease the pain of higher interest rates on mortgages?

No one needed to guess where the money might come from. Billionaires and corporations paying "their fair share." So, we learned nothing there.

Third (though many Biden's partisans don't want to hear it): The public has questions about a man in his 80s seeking a second term. Watching Biden stand and deliver an hourplus speech late in the evening was one way of seeking some answers.

No doubt most people saw what they wanted to see. It is well known that Biden has a speechimpediment. Every speech he has ever given is a trove of blips, stumbles and swallowed words that his friends admire as signs of courage, while his enemies can mine for Fox segments, viral memes and TikToks. This one was no different.

I watched with a memory front and center of a speech I heard Biden give in Washington last July. He was sharp and forceful; he moved nimbly between prepared text and ad-libs. In the 35-odd years I've listened to Biden, that speech was as good or better than anything I'd heard from him. No one ever called Joe Biden the Great Communicator.

Ithink it's fair to describe the audience reaction that night as surprised. The audience for this State of the Union might say the same thing. Biden was high-energy. He managed a give-and-take with hecklers. Speaker Mike Johnson, R-La., was clearly flummoxed. He looked like a man passing a kidney stone when Biden put his knife into the GOP refusal to vote on conservative Oklahoma Sen. James Lankford's immigration bill. "The Border Patrol union has endorsed this bill," Biden said as Lankford nodded and Johnson squirmed. "Simple choice: We can fight about fixing the border — or we can fix it."

Job one for Team Biden was to put an end to murmurs in the Democratic Party about somehow pushing the old man out of the car. The State of the Union—for decades an event in search of a purpose—managed that. Like him or not, America, Biden is headed for the November ballot.

Biden promised unity, but speech was angry, partisan

By Nicole Russell

Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram

resident Joe Biden is angry.
When he ran for office in 2020, Biden promised to restore normalcy and unity to America. In his State of the Union address Thursday, he gave a speech that was partisan, dishonest and, at times, incoherent. It wasn't an update on America, nor was it hopeful, unifying or inspiring.

In a speech that ran over an hour and lacked any structure, the 81-year-old president covered a wide range of topics, from the border and the economy to Vladimir Putin and Donald Trump — referred to frequently as Biden's "predecessor." His delivery was unusual: Biden seemed mad and divisive and occasionally slurred his words and struggled to enunciate. Rather than giving Americans a review of the last year or a list of future policy plans, Biden gave a campaign stump speech meant to reassure his base that he can still fight for a second term and rally Democrats to support him. The State of the Union address is not the place for that.

Biden is a Democrat, of course, so it makes sense that he would support liberal proposals. He did that. But he also made several claims that were either half-truths or altogether dishonest, garnering distrust among viewers. "If we change the dynamic at the border," Biden said, as if his policies had nothing to do with creating the current surge of migrants we've observed the last three years.

In a bid to look empathetic and human, Biden mentioned Laken Riley, the young Georgia woman recently slain while jogging, a crime in which a migrant in the country illegally is charged. Biden misspoke, didn't get her name correct, and seemed callous when mentioning she was killed by "an illegal."

Biden's border comment wasn't the only thing he said that didn't quite make sense. When referring to taking office during CO-VID, he said Americans are participating in a "comeback story never told." While we've learned to handle COVID and are no longer suffocating in a pandemic, most Americans likely don't feel like they're coming back from anything, particularly because of the economy.

"I inherited an economy on the brink. Now it's the envy of the world," Biden said. But this seems to be a matter of interpretation. He claimed that unemployment was at a 15-year low. "Wages keep going up and inflation keeps going down," he said. Even if some wages — like minimum wages — are going up as reports suggest, that doesn't help people who don't earn minimum wage.

For many groups, inflation still outpaced wage growth. And even if inflation is lower than it was two years ago, prices are still much higher than before he took office.

Biden was at his best slamming Trump, whom he never named the entire time. He mentioned the insurrectionists who stormed the Capitolon Jan. 6, 2021, and landed this quotable line: "Here's the simple truth: You can't love your country only when you win." On this,

We soree

In the end, the speech was full of two things that aren't good for Americans of any political persuasion. First, Biden advocated for policies that continue to hurt Americans, like abortion on demand, higher taxes for corporations and the wealthy, and government expansion of programs such as education. Government should provide people with a healthy robust structure to live their lives to the fullest; it should not act as a bank, a doctor, or a church that tries to solve everyone's problems.

Second, Biden was the most partisan he's ever been. He acted angry, dishonest and divisive. Where is the president who promised to unite Americans? Where is the president who promised to defend our traditions and norms?

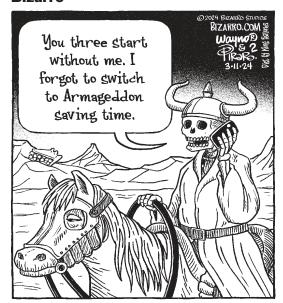

Finally, the State of the Union address should be a moment of transparency, yes, but also an opportunity for inspiration. After all, this is America. The president should reflect on where we've been but offer hope and solutions for the future. Americans are struggling to make sense of a world on the brink of widespread war, living paycheck to paycheck, and wondering how either presidential candidate reflects any of the things they care about.

When the commander in chief is well, cognizant and prepared, even if the state of the union was weak, Americans could still be hopeful, inspired, unified — strong. Biden couldn't convey any of those things. That's bad for Democrats and Republicans alike.

Jacob Bryson scored the tying goal with 8:21 remaining and Tage Thompson scored 15½ minutes into the first period as Buffalo snapped an 0-2-1 skid. Ukko-Pekka Luukkonen stopped 30 shots through overtime, and two more in the shootout, and sealed the win by getting his stick and blocker out to stop Ryan Nugent-Hopkins on the Oilers' third-and-final shootout at-

Golden Knights 5, Red Wings 3: Jonathan Marchessault scored three times, including the goahead goal with 2:44 left, to help host Vegas top Detroit and snap a four-game skid.

Pavel Dorofeyev and Brayden McNabb also scored for the Knights. Jack Eichel had three assists. Noah Hanifin and Ivan Barbashev each had two and Adin Hill stopped 23 shots.

Michael Rasmussen had a goal and assist and J.T. Compher and Shayne Gostisbehere also scored for Detroit, which has dropped five straight. James Reimer made 31

Doncic has 6th 30-point triple-double in a row

Associated Press

DETROIT — Luka Doncic became the first NBA player to record six consecutive 30-point triple-doubles as the Dallas Mavericks pulled away in the second half and beat the Detroit Pistons 142-124 on Saturday night.

Doncic finished with 39 points, 10 assists and 10 rebounds, eclipsing Russell Westbrook's mark of five straight 30-point triple-doubles. He also extended his own record with a fifth straight 35point triple-double.

"That just shows what level he's playing on right now," Mavericks coach Jason Kidd said. "He knows he can score the ball, and he's also able to find his teammates and lastly, he's able to rebound the Kyrie Irving added 21 points for Dallas, which has won two in a row after a three-game losing streak.

Shiffrin wins 1st race after six-week layoff

Associated Press

ARE, Sweden — All Mikaela Shiffrin has been really looking for in her first race back after a sixweek injury layoff was "good skiing."

What she got, though, was even by the American star's standards "an insane way to return."

Shiffrin made a triumphant comeback to the World Cup Sunday, dominating the season's penultimate slalom for career win 96 and locking up her record-equaling eighth season title in the disci-

Racing for the first time since hurting her left knee in a downhill crash in Italy, the two-time Olympic champion posted the fastest times in both runs to beat Croatian prodigy Zrinka Ljutic by a massive 1.24 seconds and third-placed Michelle Gisin of Switzerland by

"It feels like we're in a dream right now," Shiffrin said after her sixth slalom win of the season and 59th overall. "There has been so much uncertainty coming into this race. The biggest goal I had was just... good skiing in the final races of the season, so I could sort of prove I have the right pace and the right mentality to close out the season, so next year I start in a better place."

Shiffrin got much more than that. While she just edged out her competitors in the opening leg, she crushed the field in a free-flowing second run.

"This is an insane way to return," she said. "It was so nice to race again today and some nerves and all the emotions that I hoped to feel. Really proud of my team, and for sure proud of myself to get back here and show the skiing. The second run was some of my best skiing. I am just so happy to be able to do that again this season."

Shiffrin had been out since she sprained the MCL and tibiofibular ligament in her knee in January, while also still recovering from a bone bruise she had sustained at the start of the season.

"The season has been just a wild one, full of ups and downs, I think for everybody," Shiffrin said. "My own personal journey, there's definitely been some frustrating moments these past weeks, so I was just trying to get back and hoping that I could get back."

Verstappen cruises to win at Saudi Arabian GP

Max Verstappen stayed firmly on course for another season of dominance in Formula 1 on Saturday by winning the Saudi Arabian Grand Prix.

Even after just two races, and despite turmoil at Red Bull, Verstappen seems in near-total control on the track as he aims for a fourth consecutive title this year. Still, he had to share the attention with 18-year-old Oliver Bearman, who was a surprise seventh in his first F1 race as a Ferrari stand-in.

"A fantastic weekend for the whole team and also for myself. I felt really good with the car," Verstappen said.

The Dutch driver won easily ahead of his teammate Sergio Perez by 8.6 seconds on the road, 13.6 once a time penalty for Perez was factored in. Ferrari's Charles Leclerc was third.

Sean O'Malley, right, lands a blow against Marlon Vera during a bantamweight title bout at UFC 299 on Saturday night in Miami.

O'Malley keeps belt by controlling Vera; Poirier wins by KO

By Alanis Thames
Associated Press

MIAMI — Sean O'Malley emphatically defended his bantamweight belt Saturday night, unanimously outpointing Marlon "Chito" Vera in UFC 299.

In a fight that he controlled from the opening round, O'Malley (18-1) outclassed Vera with his quickness, precision striking and footwork.

The champion threw 344 punches, landing more than 50% of them. He was the more active fighter throughout, hurting Vera (23-9-1) with shots to the body, knees to the face, and countering nearly every one of Vera's connections with one of his own

It was O'Malley's first defense of his bantamweight title after stopping former champion Aljamain Sterling 51 seconds into the second round at UFC 292 last August.

UFC CEO Dana White called the performance a "clinic" by O'Malley, who is fast becoming one of the biggest stars in the sport. White added that the card was the fourthhighest grossing UFC event ever, with a gate of $14.14 million.

"He's on his way," White said of O'Malley, who some believe has star power of Conor McGregor. "He's the biggest star ever in bantamweight history. You can say that right now."

Vera handed O'Malley the only defeat of his career nearly four years ago by landing a leg kick that caused O'Malley's right foot to go numb in the first round of UFC 252

O'Malley has often downplayed that loss — the kick shut down the peroneal nerve in his lower leg, causing temporary loss of feeling — and vowed to dominate in the rematch.

"That one feels good getting that one back," O'Malley said. "I'm guessing we can all agree that I'm undefeated still."

He added that he wants to fight featherweight champion Ilia Topuria next.

"Dana," he said, "Give me a jet to Spain, baby."

Immediately after the fiveround fight, O'Malley sat down on the canvas after Vera hurt him late with a shot to the body — one that could have been much more significant if it was landed earlier in the match.

"I tried to stay toe to toe with him and catch him," said Vera, the Ecuadoran fighter who received a massive amount of cheers from the fans at Kaseya Center.. "At the end of the fifth round I landed a nice body that hurt him, but I ran out of time."

Former interim lightweight champion Dustin Poirier knocked out up-and-comer Benoit Saint Denis with a right hand in the second round of their lightweight match. Saint Denis had hurt Poirier with punches in the early round before the veteran dropped him with a right hook at 2:52 in the second round. The victory moved Poirier into a tie for the fourthmost wins in UFC history with 22.

Jack Della Maddalena stretched his winning streak to 17 with the biggest victory of his career. He stopped Gilbert Burns in the third round of their bout with a crushing knee to the head, moments after it appeared Burns had secured a fight-clinching takedown. Della Maddalena followed the knee with a series of elbows on the ground for a TKO victory at 3:43 in the final round of the 170-pound fight.

Chiefs keep DT Jones off market with massive deal

By Dave Skretta Asssociated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Super Bowl champion Kansas City Chiefs and star Chris Jones have agreed to the framework of a five-year contract that includes $95 million guaranteed and keeps the All-Pro defensive tackle off the upcoming free-agent market, a person familiar with the deal told The Associated Press late Saturday.

The person spoke to the AP on the condition of anonymity because the contract details were still being finalized. But the money that is guaranteed is expected to come over the first three years with another two years that are not guaranteed.

Jones, who turns 30 in July, becomes one of the highest-paid defensive players in NFL history, falling just behind the $34 million average annual salary that is being earned by San Francisco pass rusher Nick Bosa. The deal eclipses the $31.6 million average of Rams defensive end Aaron Donald, who had long represented the financial benchmark for a defensive player.

Jones' agents, Michael and Jason Katz, tweeted their congratulations in a post on X, formally known as Twitter, to "the highest-paid defensive tackle in NFL history."

Jones tweeted moments later: "KC....5 more years of greatness! 3x"

Jones made it clear immediately after the Chiefs beat the 49ers in overtime in the Super Bowl last month in Las Vegas, allowing them to raise their second straight Lombardi Trophy and third in five years, that he was eager to chase a three-peat. But he first needed to reach an agreement to remain in Kansas City, which had proven difficult over the past two off-

In fact, Jones and the Chiefs were at such an impasse entering the final year of his previous contract that he skipped the entire offseason program, including a mandatory minicamp and training camp, and Week 1 of the regular season. Jones piled up nearly $4 million in fines before agreeing to an incentive-laden one-year deal that got him back on the field this past season.

the way, including a meaningless regular-season finale against the Chargers, when he got the last sack he needed to reach $10\frac{1}{2}$ for the season and trigger a \$1.25 million bonus in his contract.

Jones had another half-sack in a wild-card win over Miami in one of the coldest games in NFL history, then helped Kansas City win road games over Buffalo and Baltimore to return to the Super Bowl. In that game, the Chiefs fell behind early before rallying to force overtime, then winning the game on Patrick Mahomes' touchdown pass to Mecole Hardman.

The Chiefs have been aggressive in trying to keep the core of the league's second-ranked defense together next season.

Earlier in the week, the Chiefs used the franchise tag on L'Jarius Sneed, giving them the option of keeping one of the best cover cornerbacks expected to hit free agency on a $19.8 million contract next season. The Chiefs also could sign him to a long-term deal or even trade him, which not only would provide some draft capital but also some salary cap relief.

Shortly after tagging Sneed, the Chiefs signed pending free-agent linebacker Drue Tranquill to a $19 million, three-year deal that included a $4.5 million signing bonus and $12.5 million guaranteed.

Broncos sending Jeudy to Browns

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — The Denver Broncos have agreed to send wide receiver and former first-round pick Jerry Jeudy to the Cleveland Browns for a pair of 2024 draft picks, two people with knowledge of the trade told The Associated Press on Saturday.

The people, who spoke to the AP on the condition of anonymity because the impending deal wasn't immediately announced by either team, said the Broncos would receive fifth- and sixth-round picks in next month's NFL Draft when the trade becomes official next week.

The Browns are getting a complement for No. 1 receiver Amari Cooper and another major target and deep threat for quarterback Deshaun Watson.

The Broncos will save $13 million in both cash and salary cap space by moving on from Jeudy. The first of the two draft picks they're receiving is the first pick of the fifth round. That gives Denver eight selections in the April draft.

The Broncos have cleared nearly $50 million in cap space in the last few days after informing quarterback Russell Wilson they would release him when the new league year begins next week.

Potential landing spots for Wilson include the Steelers and Giants

The Broncos released All-Pro safety Justin Simmons on Thursday and renegotiated wide receiver Tim Patrick's contract.

The Broncos used the 15th overall pick in 2020 to draft Jeudy, the highest they ever selected a wide receiver. He never lived up to that billing, in large part because Denver continued to churn through middling quarterbacks.

Jeudy often showed his frustration on the field, especially last season when he caught just two touchdown passes after a strong 2022 campaign in which he set career highs with 972 receiving yards and six TD receptions.

Jeudy has 11 career touchdown catches in four seasons. He is entering the final year of his contract after the Broncos exercised their fifth-year option on him.

The Browns were linked to Jeudy last year but were unable to finalize a deal at the trade deadline.

Cleveland figured to explore adding a top-tier wideout in free agency but was able to acquire a proven one in Jeudy, who like Cooper played at Alabama.

Jeudy's speed is expected to be an asset for Watson, who likes to throw deep and showed signs of being an elite QB again before suffering a season-ending shoulder injury in 2023.

Houston crushes Kansas to wrap up Big 12 crown

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jamal Shead had 13 points, six rebounds and eight assists, Damian Dunn added 12 points and No. 1 Houston claimed the Big 12 regular-season title in its first season in the conference, dominating No. 14 Kansas 76-46 on Saturday.

L.J. Cryer scored 11 points and J'Wan Roberts had 10 points and eight rebounds for the Cougars (28-3, 15-3), who shot 46% from the field and hit 6 3-pointers on the way to a 40-21 lead at the half.

"Showing them what we've been doing all year," Shead said. "They didn't get our best shot at Kansas, we got theirs. I guess we gave them our best shot today."

Houston shot 44% for the game and hit 11 of 29 shots from long distance, while forcing 18 turnovers and converting them into 30

"It's gratifying," Houston coach Kelvin Sampson said of winning the Big 12. "I'm happy for everybody. There's so many people that have an inferior complex about ... we're the University of Houston. This is a damn good school. We live in a damn good city, and we're a damn good basketball program. We should never ever, ever, ever take a backseat to anybody."

The Cougars closed out their regular season by winning their ninth straight game and extending their home winning streak to 22 games.

"It's almost like people thought the only teams we played were American (Athletic Conference)," Sampson said of Houston's former conference. "You don't get to the Final Four or Elite Eight or Sweet Sixteen without beating other really, really good teams. The only difference was playing them every night, but they had to play us, too."

Hunter Dickinson had 11 points and six rebounds for Kansas, but left with 11:08 remaining holding his right shoulder after battling for a rebound.

Kansas coach Bill Self said Dickinson dislocated his shoulder, but it popped back in.

"He will have an MRI to see what the diagnosis is and try to get a game plan moving forward for him," Self said.

Kevin McCullar Jr., who tweaked his knee earlier in the week against Kansas State, was scoreless in 15 minutes in the first half. He didn't play in the second

"Kevin, he hadn't done anything since K-State much, and then, today, he felt better, thought he'd try," Self said. "I wish we wouldn't have played Kev. It's a pretty level of concern when your two best players are questionable moving forward."

Self added that it was too soon to know if either would be available for the upcoming Big 12 Tournament.

Kansas (22-9, 10-8) has lost three of its last four games. The Jayhawks shot 33% and were 3for-21 from 3-point distance.

Bay: Transfers having big impact on Tar Heels

The Tar Heels won the first meeting with Duke behind a monster effort from Stanford transfer Harrison Ingram. They won Round 2 behind the other transfer starter in Ryan, who shot 8-for-12 overall, including 6-for-8 from 3point range, and 9-for-10 from the foul line.

He ended with the best scoring total by a UNC player against Duke since eventual national player of the year Antawn Jamison had 35 points in a February 1998 win that stood as a 1-vs.-2 national matchup.

It was also the highest-scoring output by a UNC player at Duke's famed Cameron Indoor Stadium since Davis had 35 in a loss in March 1992.

"Cormac, I mean, he's got that dog in him," UNC veteran big man Armando Bacot said, adding that Ryan "brought the fire today."

"To go out there and be that unconscious in a big game like this with so much at stake, it just speaks to how crazy he is," Bacot added.

Ryan certainly looked comfortable even in Cameron's hostile confines, though it makes sense considering it's nothing he hasn't seen before. Even in today's older game with the transfer portal, he's a college-ancient 25 years old who started his college career at Stanford during the 2018-19 season.

He arrived having played 145 college games, including one in which he had 28 points with four 3-pointers for the Fighting Irish in a February 2021 win.

That one came here in front of no Cameron Crazies amid the CO-VID-19 pandemic. This time, everyone was packed into the venerable campus arena to see it shots, celebrations and all.

Those first two 3s from the right corner set the tone for everything, both for himself and as part of UNC's game-opening 10-2 run on the way to a 15-point margin.

"You've got to not give Ryan two open 3s to start the game," Duke coach Jon Scheyer said. "You would feel pretty good if coming into Cameron, it's just two wideopen 3s to start off. And that sets the tone for the night."

Indeed, UNC never trailed and repeatedly turned back push after push by the Blue Devils. Ryan was at the center of it all.

There was Ryan taking a kickout feed from Bacot to smoothly bury an NBA-range 3-pointer, then running back up court screaming and sticking his tongue out with the Tar Heels back up 10 at the 10-minute mark

Several minutes later, he buried another one for a 75-66 lead at the 3:49 mark and held his finger to his lips in a silence-please message to the Crazies.

Then came his biggest: a clean, catch-and-fire, long 3 with Jeremy Roach hovering inches away. That gave UNC a 78-69 lead with 1:38 left, and Ryan started screaming in Roach's direction as he retreated back up the court.

Rvan closed his scoring by swishing two clinching free throws with 4.7 seconds remaining. Moments later, as the horn sounded, Ryan immediately raised his right hand to wave goodbye and pointed with his left arm directly into the center of the Crazies at midcourt.

"Listen, it's not personal, that's just who I am," Ryan said. "I'm a fiery guy. That's what you come here to do, to play in front of these fans and these environments and just feed off that. And I sure do and I know these guys do, too."

DURHAM, N.C. — It took roughly two minutes before North Carolina guard Cormac Ryan caught a pass and buried a corner 3-pointer with no hesitation in front of Duke's rowdy fans.

He followed with another 16 seconds later from the same spot, then turned to face the "Cameron Crazies" and curse at them.

And the graduate transfer from Notre Dame never shut up, either — yapping, screaming, shushing the crowd and shaking his head with his tongue wagging about after making big shot after big shot. He finished with a career-high 31 points as the seventh-ranked Tar Heels secured the program's first Atlantic Coast Conference outright regular-season title since 2017

It was an output that ranked among the best by a UNC player in decades in the rivalry, offering a reminder of the veteran's unflappable confidence and competitive zip that could prove critical deeper into March.

"That's just who I am, man," Ryan said of his demonstrative celebrations in Saturday night's 84-79 win against the ninth-ranked Blue Devils. "I can't control it. I love playing in these environments. I love being in front of the fire. I love it."

UNC coach Hubert Davis added Ryan as part of an offseason overhaul after a disappointing flop from preseason No. 1 to missing the NCAA Tournament last year. He wanted the 6-foot-5 guard's veteran presence along with a feisty competitive edge.
