ZITS

BY JERRY SCOTT AND JIM BORGMAN

Jeremy, there's some mail for you on the counter.

K.

What is it?

A Christmas card from my grandma...

...with a fifty-dollar bill inside!

What are you going to do with it?

I dunno.

Exchange it for a gift card, I guess.

CANDORVILLE

BY DARRIN BELL

In my past life, I was Quetzalcoatl.

I wasn't a god, although people came to see me as one, so I just rolled with it.

I was a survivor of the great global cataclysm at the end of the last ice age. You may have heard of it as the Great Flood.

We were Atlanteans. Only a few hundred of us survived. We pledged to ensure that at least the babies of our great civilization would endure.

So we scattered ourselves to the four corners of the Earth, and we taught the random vagabonds we came across how to farm, how to forge tools, how to build large structures, etc.

Okay, I guess that would explain your feelings of inadequacy.

My current self can't even build a campfire.

DILBERT

BY SCOTT ADAMS

We're getting a lot of heat from the media for using Elbonian slave labor to make our sneakers.

So I hired the Dogbert Public Relations Firm to help us with our messaging.

Excuse me, is our messaging the problem here... or is it more about the slave part?

I'm fairly sure all footwear is made by slaves.

Really? You believe all footwear is made by slaves?

I assume so. Why would anyone use paid labor when they could just use slaves?

Morality?

You're fired.

I warned you about that.

I think we should hang the new TV over on that wall.

IT’S THE PERFECT SPOT FOR IT!

...so, if I left the door open...

...I could watch TV while I’m in there.

Okay, we’ll hang it in a different room.
