Celebrating Month of the Military Child

MAKING FRIENDS

Making new friends can be hard, but I found that if you try to make friends and talk to new people you can find a best friend. The night before my first day of school I was very scared and nervous. The next day when I walked into HCES for the first time I was scared, nervous, and worried. When I got inside the classroom I sat down next to three other people. I started talking to one of them. We found out we have a lot in common and we knew we would be good friends. So we became friends. Later that day we went to P.E. The coach assigned groups of two and I started talking to my classmate that was in my group. She asked me if I wanted to be her friend so I said yes. Soon I became friends with the whole class. This school year when my teacher was taking attendance she called my best friend's name. I hoped it was my best friend, and a few minutes later she walked into the classroom! We were so excited to see each other! Making new friends can also be very easy if you think about it.

CELEBRATING MONTH OF THE MILITARY CHILD

1st Grade • Ms. Park

Being a military child is exciting. I go to fun places like California and Korea. The reason why I went to California is because I get to see my grandma. And the reason why I went to Korea is because my dad and my mom want to work together.

My brother and I are military children. We go to new schools and we go to new places. We pick our own beds and we get to have new best friends.

I am moving on my birthday. I don't know where I am going.

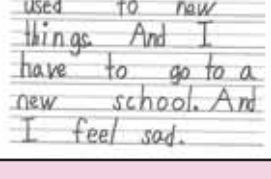

Being a military kid is like feeling sad when I move. And you might miss your friends and your friends from kindergarten, pre-K, 1st grade and 2nd grade. I am moving to California on April 10.

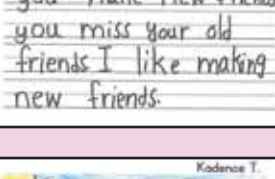

I am happy I am a military child. In summer I am going to a fun place. The place is called Nintendo Land. I will live in a hotel. The food looks like Mario and the rides are fun.

Being a military child is fun. You can go to fun places and you can pick your own home. Going to fun places is fun. I went to a hotel in Hawaii and it had a beach. And it had two pools. It was fun.

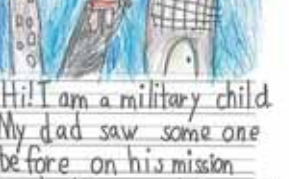

I'm a military child and I always get used to new things. And I have to go to a new school. And I feel sad.

Being a military child means seeing the same friends again. If you make new friends, you miss your old friends. I like making new friends.

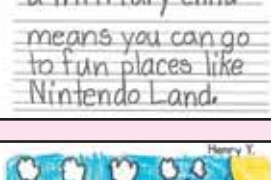

Being a military child is fun because you can make new friends. If you make new friends, and if they say yes or no, I would choose yes because I really want to be with him or her.

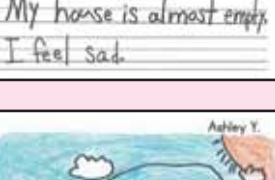

Hi! I am a military child. My dad saw some one before on his mission and then saw him again one time in China. It is great to be a military child. My name is Ronan X.W. Bye! Bye!

Being a military child is fun. When I go all around the world, I will know all the flags. When I leave Korea, I am going to Kansas. I will learn all the languages too. I am so excited.

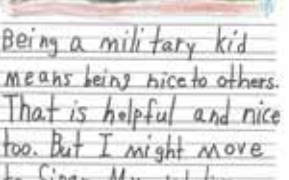

As a military child I move. It is fun sometimes. In the spring, I am going to go to Japan. Being a military child means you can go to fun places like Nintendo Land.

I will miss my old friends because I love all of my friends. They are so kind and I will miss them. And they care. I will be moving to Kentucky in 3 months. My house is almost empty. I feel sad.

Being a military kid is like moving and going and missing your old friends. And they miss you too, but you make different friends of different cultures. You might see your old friends and make new ones. That's how every military kid might be like. That's how I am a military kid!

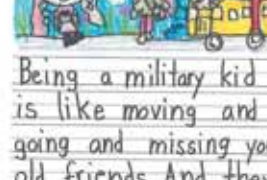

Being a military kid means being nice to others. That is helpful and nice too. But I might move to Spain. My dad lives there and my dad misses his friend but it was so fun. But I have a uncle and auntie and cousins too. I like it.

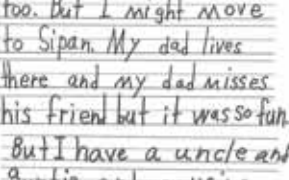

Being a military child, I always have to move every 3 years. I do not know where I am moving to but I hope it is safe there. And my friends will miss me. And I will miss them too.

Being a military kid is hard because I have to move every 3 years. And I have to change schools. And I will move to America. I will miss my old friends. I will be unhappy.

Being a military kid is like moving and going and missing your old friends. And they miss you too, but you make different friends of different cultures. You might see your old friends and make new ones. That's how every military kid might be like. That's how I am a military kid!

I like to go to the PX. I like pizza Hut and soda. I like my home because I have Minecraft.

Becoming a military kid

Hi, my name is Calvin. I'm 12 years old and live with my mom in Idaho. My dad is in the Army, stationed in South Korea. He flies Black Hawks. Even though we are many miles apart, I love spending time with him playing online video games. I also enjoy drawing and learning about the military.

Although it will be hard to leave my family and friends in Idaho, I am looking forward to moving to live with my military family and go to school in South Korea next year. I hope you enjoy my drawing, "Black Hawk at Sunset."

CONNECTING WITH KOREA

Free classes offer military community chance to explore through art

STORY AND PHOTOS BY HYEMIN LEE,
STRIPES KOREA

For the U.S. military community in Pyeongtaek, a local university is fostering cultural connections through free Korean art classes for military spouses and children.

At Hankyong National University's Pyeongtaek campus, military spouses can learn Minhwa, a traditional Korean folk painting style, and kids can take 3D printing class.

Under the direction of Professor Jeanny Lim, the classes are designed to teach students new skills and also create a bridge between the local community and the largest military community in Korea.

"These programs are not for short-term experiences," Lim said. "Each student will ultimately be cultural ambassadors who can foster mutual understanding between the two communities."

Students get access to professional facilities, high-quality resources and support from trained university students. More importantly, the courses sponsored by the Ministry of Education in Korea provide a safe and reliable learning environment from an accredited university.

The campus is about nine kilometers from Osan Air Base and 15 kilometers from Camp Humphreys, making it easily accessible for the base community. Anyone who is interested in participating in the program can inquire by phone or email.

 This article was written at the request of the Pyeongtaek SOFA Support Center. (The Pyeongtaek SOFA Support Center, operated by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, serves as a bridge connecting the local community with the U.S. military community in Pyeongtaek.)*

- LOCATION: 5-3 Jangan-dong, Pyeongtaek-si, Gyeonggi-do (Hankyong National University Pyeongtaek Campus)

Korean traditional painting class (Minhwa)

Minhwa is a folk painting form depicting the lives of commoners and natural elements like flowers, butterflies and tigers dating back to the Joseon Dynasty. The art form employs techniques and media like traditional hanji paper, natural pigments and animal hair paintbrushes. Each brushstroke connects students with the joy, beauty and traditions of historical Korea while allowing them to express their own creativity.

Sharon Galyon, a Minhwa student from Osan Air Base, said the class was a "dream come true" for her and a great opportunity to learn about Korean art while interacting with locals.

"Most art programs only offered one-day sessions or short-term classes," Galyon said. "This Minhwa class has allowed me to attend for nearly a year, giving me the time to fully immerse myself in the beauty of traditional Korean art."

The class is led by Eunha Park, a professional Minhwa artist, and does not require prior art experience. Students are carefully guided to create their own masterpieces in a supportive group setting. Later, they even have opportunities to showcase their work during planned exhibits open to the public.

Art exhibit at Osan AB

Earlier this year, more than 20 pieces of students' art was displayed through a temporary exhibit at Osan Air Base. The exhibit had its opening at the Osan Air Base Officer's Club on March 6, then the pieces were displayed until March 12 at the base library.

The exhibition attracted members of the military community seeking to appreciate the work of the Minhwa artists.

At the opening, Shannon Ng, a student representative, expressed gratitude for both Lim and Park's commitment to military spouses and children. Ng said the class helped instill a deeper connection to Korean traditions and art, while also cultivating friendships.

3D printing class

The university's 3D course gives children the opportunity to design and create accessories or cups using cutting-edge printing technology. Students get to take their creations home, which in turn can be meaningful souvenirs of their time spent in Korea.

For Ezra Latterell, a student from Osan Air Base, the class has meant learning new skills from Professor Giwon Kim to create more 3D-printed objects.

"I usually build a paper elevator or a LEGO city at home, and now I'm learning new skills to make more fun stuff through this class," Latterell said. "A cat is the first thing I made!"

Children are encouraged to bring any questions or ideas back to the classroom. By blending technical education with opportunities to connect with the local community, the program provides valuable learning experiences for participants from U.S. military bases in Pyeongtaek.
