Crafts for Kids

WHEN THE WEATHER TURNS COLD, THE WIND PICKS UP AND THE RAIN HAMMERS DOWN RELENTLESSLY, IT'S A GOOD IDEA TO HAVE INDOOR ACTIVITIES TO KEEP KIDS BUSY. WITH JUST A FEW RANDOM SUPPLIES, KIDS CAN MAKE SOME PRETTY AWESOME PROJECTS. JUST REMEMBER TO HAVE A GOOD CLEAN-UP PLAN IN PLACE! HERE ARE SIX PROJECTS FOR YOUR KIDS TO KEEP BUSY THIS FALL.

What you'll need:

- Empty toilet paper rolls
- Black or brown tempera paint
- Black or brown construction paper
- Paintbrush
- Black pipe cleaners
- Scissors
- Hole punch
- Glue
- Googly eyes
- Black and silver markers
- Bat wing template (optional)

Create a Hanging Bat

Paint your toilet paper roll black or brown, depending on the color bat you'd like. Let dry. Draw bat wings onto construction paper and cut out. Glue wings onto back of toilet paper roll. Cut out small triangles from construction paper for ears and glue onto bat, along with googly eyes. Use marker to draw a mouth. Punch two holes in the bottom of bat for legs. Cut black pipe cleaner in half. Twist one end of each pipe cleaner through the punched holes. To create feet, snip the last inch off the pipe cleaner. Wrap the piece around the bottom of each leg. Fold the middle part of the foot to make a hook for hanging. Hang bat.

HAND and FOOTPRINT TURKEYS

Coat child's hand with yellow paint and press firmly onto white craft paper. Repeat with orange and red paint with the palm in the same spot to create turkey feathers. Set aside to dry. Coat child's foot with brown paint and toes with orange paint and press firmly onto white craft paper. Set aside to dry. Cut around the handprints and footprints when dry. Cut a red tear drop shape for the waddle and a yellow triangle shape for the beak. Attach waddle, beak, and googly eyes to footprint to create turkey face. Glue handprints to the back of footprint. Voila! A turkey.

What you'll need:

- Red, yellow, orange and brown craft paint
- Paintbrushes
- Wipes
- Red, white and orange craft paper
- Googly eyes
- Scissors
- Glue

Paper Plate LEAF WREATH

Cut out the middle of the paper plate. Stick leaves onto plate using sticky dots or glue guns until the plate is no longer visible. Make a loop out of ribbon and secure on the back of the paper plate. Hang and admire.

PINE CONE Bird FEEDERS

What you'll need:

- Pine cones (the more open the better)
- Peanut butter
- Twine
- Bird seed

Cut twine long enough to tie around the top of the pine cone and hang from a tree branch (12-20"). Tie twine around top of pine cone. Using a small spatula or butter knife, spread peanut butter on the pine cone. Pour birdseed into a bowl and roll the pine cone in the seed. Sprinkle more directly onto the pine cone if necessary. Hang in a location where you can watch the birds enjoy.

Popsicle stick SCARECROWS

What you'll need:

- 8 Popsicle sticks
- Glue
- Brown, yellow, white and orange paper
- Scissors
- Brown or black marker
- Brown paint
- Cereal box

Cut a rectangle out of the cereal box and spread glue all over it. Stick on 7 popsicles in a row. Cut a few strands of "hair" out of the yellow paper. Glue the last Popsicle stick diagonally to make the scarecrow's hat with the yellow hair behind it. Paint hat brown and let dry. Cut eyes from white paper, a nose from orange paper and create a flower with yellow paper. Draw on a smile with the marker.

PUFFY GHOSTS

Start by cutting a ghost template in the white cardstock. Glue cotton balls onto the template until the ghost is covered. Cut out eyes and a mouth from black paper, glue to ghost. For extra fun, add a string and hang up your ghost!

What you'll need:

- White cardstock
- Scissors
- Glue
- Cotton balls
- Black paper

Embracing GERMANY

Alpine Cattle Drives

By Stacy Roman

Cattle drives invoke images harkening back to the Old West. Lone ranchers sporting a ten-gallon Stetson attempting to lasso a stray cow while riding a trusty steed across vast miles of arid, cacti-riddled landscape a la John Wayne, or the less-glamorous “City Slickers.” However, if you ask your friendly German neighbor about cattle drives, you’ll likely get a much different answer. The “Almabtrieb” or “Vihscheid” is the annual Alpine cattle drive which takes place in the high altitudes of the Bavarian mountains. It’s an event you won’t want to miss.

WHAT EXACTLY IS “ALMABTRIEB” AND “VIEHSCHIED?”

“Almabtrieb” and “Vihscheid” are basically the same thing — an Alpine cattle drive. In the Allgäu region of Bavaria, it’s referred to as “Vihscheid” or cattle separation. Near Berchtesgaden as well as in Austria and Switzerland, it’s more commonly known as “Almabtrieb.” Dating back to the Bronze Age, this time-honored tradition is engrained in German culture. Each spring, farmers and ranchers lead their branded cattle up to the higher pastures in the Alps. During the summer, the cows munch and graze their way around these green meadows. Not only does this help feed the cattle, but also helps reduce mountain erosion.

As the leaves begin to change and fall rears its head toward the end of September, it’s time to bring the cattle back down the mountains. Farmers dressed in traditional Bavarian garb (think Lederhosen, Dirndls and fedoras) lead their herd back to town. To celebrate, the cattle are often adorned with stunning floral headdresses, wreaths and gigantic metal bells which clang incessantly as they make their way home. Once the cows make it to the final destination, it’s time to start the party. Festivals with local fare, plenty of frosty beverages and traditional music are held. It’s quite similar to Oktoberfest, only a little rowdier.

KNOW BEFORE YOU GO

“Almabtrieb” and “Vihscheid” are subject to changes and cancellations, so you’ll want to check the visitor websites to be sure of the dates and details. In light of the recent pandemic, this year’s events may be smaller or may not be held at all. Also, if even just one cow meets an untimely demise or is severely injured during the summer months while up in the mountains, the procession is usually held without the fanfare and festival out of respect. If the cattle drive takes place, it usually occurs mid to late September. Most popular in the Tyrol, Allgäu and Berchtesgaden regions, each “Almabtrieb” carries its own distinct flare. In Schönau, the cows are herded onto a boat which takes them across the crystal-clear waters of Königssee. In some areas, other animals such as goats or sheep may join in the long walk home.

While the notion of cattle drives is considerably different from what we’re used to in the States, it’s no less spectacular to witness at least once while you’re stationed in Germany. They don’t party until the cows come home — they party because they came home. ■

GERMANY'S HIGHLIGHT

Fall Colors

By Amanda Palumbo

because it is the season that gives us the reason
to live: fall.

© TUPUNGATO/23RF.COM

Jokes aside, what we love about Germany in spring and summer, its lush green vegetation, is why we fall in love all over again come September. The temperature starts to drop, the air becomes crisper and the leaves evolve into new hues. There really isn't a bad view in Germany during autumn, but there are a few key places to snap that Instagram-worthy photo of all those bright #fallcolors.

Schwangau

This adorable Bavarian village never disappoints as it fills with fantastic fall colors every year. The town is most famous for the castle that towers over it, the Neuschwanstein Castle. This 19th-century Romanesque Revival palace is the castle on so many Bavarian postcards. The castle itself provides panoramic views of the mountains, rivers, lakes and the kaleidoscope of colors from the changing trees below. If you want that iconic shot of the castle sitting on the hilltop with the wide array of fall colors behind it, head to Marienbrücke, or Marien Bridge. Crossing the bridge is free and a great place to take in the view.

If you time your visit just right, you can witness something that is quintessential Bavaria: an Alpine cattle drive. Celebrations are held in late September or early October, but only if herdsman return with the cattle without any accidents along the way. There is music, dancing and parades complete with cows adorned with elaborate floral headdresses. Plus, it's a great opportunity to wear your Dirndl or Lederhosen!

Baden-Baden

We could easily say, "Go to the Black Forest to see fall colors," but considering the Black Forest is more than 6,000 square kilometers (and much of it evergreen trees), we'll narrow it down for you. A popular forest village that has everything a fall-watcher would want is the town so nice they named it twice, Baden Baden.

Baden-Baden is a fairytale village that transforms into an autumn paradise, bursting with a sea of orange, red and even purple vegetation. The great thing about Baden-Baden is you don't have to go very far to experience this parade of color. The forest not only encircles the town but also weaves through it. You can walk down the city streets and be surrounded by a cascade of falling orange and yellow leaves. If you need a little extra R&R, Baden-Baden is an incredible spa town with healing thermal baths.

An honorable-mention spot is just a 40-minute drive south of Baden-Baden. The city of Kehl, along the German-French border, is a prime spot for Rhine River cruises. Sipping fine Germany wine on a crisp fall day while taking in the theater of chromaticity before you will be one of your favorite memories.

Berchtesgaden National Park

I know we feature Berchtesgaden National Park a lot but for good reason. It is by far one of the best national parks in Europe. In autumn, it transforms into something truly magical. Thanks to the diversity of its forest, you can witness an incredible mix of leaves changing into a colorful gold menagerie while the evergreens remain their shade of hunter green.

Berchtesgaden offers some of the best hiking Germany has to offer with trails that range from stroller-friendly to advanced. There are incredible walking paths around Lake Königssee, which provides a photographer's dream. That same symphony of color reflects off the bright blue water, along with a stunning backdrop of the snow-capped Alps. When you snap this picture make sure to tag it #nofilter because beauty this pristine will never need one.

Good to know:

Autumn officially starts on September 22nd. Fall colors are usually at their peak around mid-October. While out admiring all the colors, make sure to have a jacket and an umbrella handy. Germany's weather can be very unpredictable in the fall. ■

Rediscover Enchanting
GERMANY

By Stacy Roman

This time of year in Germany is almost magical. There's a chill to the air, the days grow shorter and festival season is usually in full swing. However, this year is a little different. While the leaves transform into brilliant shades of red and orange, most of the social landscape has changed. With the cancelation of festivals—including the world-famous Oktoberfest—it can feel a bit deflating. Don't let it get you down! Now is a fantastic time to rediscover how amazing our host nation truly is. From breathtaking scenery and bustling cities to time honored traditions and a bit of deep-fried goodness, there are plenty of reasons to fall in love with Germany.

FULL OF WONDEROUS SIGHTS

There is no shortage of spectacular places to see. Castles dating back hundreds of years can be found everywhere. Even just driving on the autobahn, you're likely to spot them from afar. Nestled in valleys or perched atop a hill overlooking towns and rivers, some such as the timeless Schloss Heidelberg stand as testaments to their former glory. Others like Neuschwanstein and Burg Eltz boast unparalleled vistas and harken back to fairy tales from childhood.

In the north, the isolated wind-swept island of Sylt offers miles of sand dunes and pristine coastline. In the west, vineyards line the vast rolling hills along the Mosel and Rhine rivers. Fall is my favorite time to visit, as the changing leaves set the hillsides ablaze with crimson and gold. The Black Forest is a favorite for many. With hiking trails and charming villages, the region is also known for intricately carved handmade cuckoo clocks. Bordering Switzerland and Austria are the majestic mountains. Filled with jagged peaks, crystal clear lakes, deep ravines and gorges, the Alps are simply breathtaking.

Eibsee Lake,
Bavaria

VIBRANT METROPOLISES

Even if you're not fond of busy urban centers, Germany's cities are wonderfully eclectic and unique. Housing the European Central Bank and the German stock market, Frankfurt is a burgeoning financial powerhouse. Along with its skyscrapers and blossoming businesses, Frankfurt is home to plenty of traditions. Each year it hosts the Buchmesse—the world's largest book fair. It also has its share of culinary favorites with "Apfelwein," apple wine and "Grüne Soße," green sauce which originate in the region.

The capital city of Berlin has a rich and complex history. Once split into two, East and West Berlin, signs of the dichotomy are still visible today. Visitors can trace the delineating line of the Berlin Wall by walking along the bricks which are cemented into the ground. Remnants of the wall remain and are now a living art gallery.

Brandenburg Gate

Reaching further back are museums dedicated to coming to terms with the atrocities committed in World War II. A visible reminder of the war still stands at the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church. The bombed shell of the building pierces the sky, with gaping holes in the tower. While the church was rebuilt in a more modern style, the original remains as testament to the cost of war.

EAT AND DRINK ALL THE THINGS

There is an amazing amount of good German eats to discover. Sure, we all miss our legit Mexican cuisine; however, I promise you there are plenty of delicious dishes which might help make up for it. "Käsebrezels," cheese pretzels bigger than your face, crispy golden weinerschnitzel, and melt-in-your-mouth "apfelstrudel" topped with vanilla sauce are just a few tasty morsels to try. Although each region has its own specialties (Lebkuchen in Nuremberg, Flammkuchen in Saarland and Rheinland-Pfalz), one of the most popular dishes around the country is currywurst. Thought to have originated in Berlin, this savory dish consists of a cooked bratwurst slathered in a curry-based ketchup sauce and is often accompanied by piping hot frites.

Of course, it wouldn't be a meal without having something to wash it down with. Grab a liter or "Maß" of one of Germany's legendary beers.

Once brewed to perfection according to Reinheitsgebot, or purity laws, beer was created with water, barley and hops. The brews created and sold at Oktoberfest each year must follow the tradition of Reinheitsgebot. More a wine drinker? Taste your way along the Deutsche Weinstraße, or German Wine Road. Spanning the rolling hills along the Mosel and Rhine Rivers, discover award-winning wines which makes this region so special.

When you're first assigned to Germany, it's easy to start planning your trips to other countries and cities. However, don't forget to look right in your backyard. From spectacular landscapes, culinary hikes and seasonal markets, there is so much to explore and rediscover in this fantastic host nation we're lucky enough to call home. Although this year may look a bit different from most, the traditions and culture of Germany still shines through. ■

Mespelbrunn Castle

WHY GO THERE

This romantic location, hidden in a forest of colors, is one of few castles that remains unscathed from various wars. Its survival is likely due to its moderately concealed location within the mountain forests. Though the castle is not particularly large, it offers a delightful insight into the past, especially since it has continuously been inhabited.

Nestled in the forest of the Spessart Mountains and surrounded by a water-filled moat, Mespelbrunn Castle is truly a historical gem. Known as a water castle, it features a mashup of late medieval and early Renaissance architectural styles. This amazing piece of history is untouched by the ravages of war and still functions as a residence today in Germany. This little castle is the perfect spot for a day trip from Frankfurt, as it is located just outside the city.

This lovely castle dates back to 1412 when it was just a modest house. Hamann Echter was the first owner and was given the title of Vizedom of Aschaffenburg from Prince Johann von Nassau, the Archbishop of Mainz. The original house has undergone many updates to become an impressive castle. In 1427, surrounding walls, towers and a defensive moat were added. Today the only thing remaining from the 15th century is the impressive round tower. Most of what you can see today was built in the 16th century, from 1551-1569. The architectural updates strongly reflect a traditional Renaissance manor house.

Perhaps the most famous Echter family member to live in the castle was Julius Echter (1545-1617). He was the Prince-Bishop of Würzburg and constructed multiple churches in the area in an effort to perform an ecclesiastical restoration of the Catholic Church. These new churches were Gothic style, featuring steep, black slate roofs. In just three years, around 100,000 people returned to the Catholic faith. The Echter family owned the castle until 1665, when the last male heir passed. Through marriage, the Counts of Ingelheim took ownership of the castle and eventually opened it to the public in 1930 for tours.

When you visit the castle, you'll see a square-shaped central building resting on the east side of the lake. The inner courtyard is surrounded by multiple-story wings and there are two towers. The southern wing of the castle is currently inhabited by the Counts of Ingelheim. However, you can still tour the north wing and other parts of the castle. Rooms open for touring feature the family's furniture that has been collected over the years. You can visit the Knight's Hall, chapel, banquet hall, which is full of weapons and the ancestor's hall, featuring family portraits. There is also a particularly interesting Chinese room that features items from East Asia.

If you're hungry, the little cafe on site is a great place to grab a bite to eat. Here you can find schnitzel, sandwiches, salads, coffee, brats and more. Enjoy views of the castle while you fuel up and enjoy the beauty of the surrounding forest.

Mespelbrunn Castle is a great day trip from Frankfurt, as it is only about an hour away via A3. Once you arrive, you must take a 40-minute tour to see the interior. All tours are in German, unless you request one in English prior to arrival. There is ample parking just outside the castle grounds.

Add Mespelbrunn Castle to your growing list of travel destinations. After all, it's not every day you get to see a castle that is surrounded by a moat, has a 15th-century tower that is standing and is still inhabited! Step back in time and appreciate the intricate architectural styles and the beautiful nature that surrounds the castle grounds. Who knows, maybe you'll be inspired to build a "castle" and grounds of your own some day! ■
