Iconic Venice looks so unusual to those who have not grown up on the water, but imagine what it would be like to accomplish your errands via boat! This spectacular city built on a marshy archipelago is not without its issues, as it is very slowly sinking into the water, and beautiful historic architecture is sometimes at risk of flooding. The grand white dome of the Basilica di Santa Maria della Salute was built in 17th century after a major plague outbreak that killed a third of the city's population in 1630 and 1631. Each year, a festival of thanksgiving, the Festa della Madonna della Salute, is held to commemorate the end of the epidemic.

Idar-Oberstein

By Tamala Malerk

Idar-Oberstein is a “gem” of a city—literally. The city is filled with actual gems and figurative ones such as castles, museums, historical monuments, eateries and more.

“ There are five monuments you should keep an eye out for including fountains, statues and bridges. ”

Learn Something

At the German Gem Museum (Deutsche Edelsteinmuseum), gems from all over the world are found in 10,000 exhibits across three floors and demonstrates the more than 500-year-old gem industry in the area. Along with gemstones, you will also find sculptures and crafted engravings. The German Mineral Museum (Deutsche Mineralienmuseum), presents jewelry from the 19th and 20th centuries across four floors of exhibits. The museum has recently acquired a collection of 50 sculptures crafted from rare minerals and metals created by the French artist-couple Claudius Barbat and Katherine Dimitri-Barbat. The Industrial Monument Jakob Bengel teaches you all about the 130-year-old industrial industry in Idar-Oberstein (say that five times fast). Learn all about jewelry products, techniques and materials from the region.

See Something

The Oberstein Castle is beautiful to see and tells the story of a community coming together. The castle was built in the 14th century and over the centuries was ravaged by war and age. Further disintegration and neglect led to major damage to the castle in the mid-20th century. In 1998, the citizens of Idar-Oberstein banded together and formed the Oberstein Castle Club which has since repaired walls and restored rooms for visitors. The Bosselstein Castle is more of an "ancient ruin" than an intact castle, but it is still a great photographic scene that provides a clear view of the town and is worth the hike to see.

Do Something

At the Steinkaulenberg Mine, meander through visitor tunnels and feel as if you are in a fairytale and dig for treasure. Children and adolescents can also go mining in the fields. (Registration is required for treasure hunting and field mining). Rent a paddle boat and watch a multi-media show about precious stones (available in English, German and four other languages) at the Weiherschleife Grinding.

Find Something

As you are exploring the area, there are five monuments you should keep an eye out for including fountains, statues and bridges. Make it a family game to see who spots all five first. A person sits atop the Fountain at the Marketplace. A spherical sight awaits you at the Fountain at the Gemstone Circle. Jewish citizens of Idar-Oberstein who were deported and murdered from 1933 to 1945 are memorialized at the Jewish Memorial. A beautiful statue stands at the end of the Peter Drey Bridge. Finally, see if you can spot the statue of Lorenzo the Ice Cream Man giving out his signature treat.

Eat Something

Das Spießbratenhaus: Restaurant Alte-Kanzlei & Café Ratsstübchen provides a multi-page menu that ensures that there will be something for everyone. The featured Spießbraten is a large piece of seasoned meat, stuffed with onion and rested for eight to 24 hours before being roasted on an open beech wood fire. Another is Eckstein Bar and Food, but this is one that you will want to leave the kids at home for. The very inappropriately titled food and drinks are not only delicious but also provide many immature giggles at the table. ■

The Italian metropolis of Milan packs so much punch into one city it's hard to know where to begin when planning a trip. There's just so much to see and do! Not only is Milan one of four fashion capitals of the world, but it is also home to 113 Michelin-starred restaurants. You're sure to enjoy some seriously good food here and the shopping will be nothing short of incredible. Add in the outstanding architecture, and Milan just might steal your heart. Even if you only have minimal time here, be sure to make it memorable!

Architecture

No trip to Milan is complete without visiting the cathedral. The Duomo di Milano is located in the heart of Milan, and construction started on this masterpiece in 1386. Surprisingly, it took until 1965 to complete! With its Italian Gothic style, the front of the cathedral is an elaborate work of art. It's almost impossible to take in all of the details, considering there are 3,400 statues, 135 gargoyles and 700 figures. Imagine being in charge of designing one of the biggest Catholic cathedrals in the world! Be sure to make the trek up to the top via the steps or an elevator for sweeping views of the city from this architectural giant.

As with almost any European city worth its salt, you must visit the resident castle. In Milan, that castle originated in the 15th century and is known as Castello Sforzesco. One of the most defining features of the castle is the massive brick fortification with towers that surround it. The design of the walls includes built-in perforations used for scaffolding to maintain the walls. You can also see where the moat would have been. The central and most dominating tower, Torre del Filarete, has undergone many renovations and is a modern reconstruction. If you venture inside, you'll be delighted to find seven museums that chronicle the city's culture and civic history. Don't miss out on seeing artwork by Michelangelo at the Museo della Pietà Rondanini and Leonardo da Vinci's work at Sala Delle Asse.

If you're looking for green space perfect for picnicking in this metropolis, the Parco Sempione is adjacent to the castle. Designed in the 1800s after the form of romantic English parks, it features tons of forested paths with monuments big and small, a lake, an arena and a museum.

Another incredible structure in the area is the Basilica of Sant'Ambrogio. This church is one of the oldest in Milan. It was built by St. Ambrose from 379 – 386 A.D. Over the years it has undergone several reconstructions and renovations. The current facade style is Romanesque and was completed in the 12th century. The structure is somewhat unusual and features two red-brick bell towers that are not the same height and were built 300 years apart. When you visit, you'll learn about monastic life and how the towers came to be built this way. This basilica is of particular importance because St. Ambrose is the patron saint of Milan. His body is on display inside the basilica's crypt.

Within certain walls, you'll find world-renowned artwork gracing the interior, such as Da Vinci's The Last Supper mural at the Santa Maria delle Grazie. It is a massive piece—almost nine meters wide and was painted from 1494 to 1498 with the goal of turning the old convent into a mausoleum for the Duke of Milan's family. A shift in plans came however, when a smaller mortuary chapel was built instead for the noble family.

Basilica of Sant'Ambrogio

The basilica is free to enter and open daily.

Castle Sforzesco

The castle is free to enter, but access to all the museums costs five euros for an adult ticket. It is closed on Mondays.

Galleria Vittorio Emanuele II

Fashion

Since Milan is one of Italy's most fashionable cities, don't pass up an opportunity to at least window-shop in the area. You'll see some incredible fashion pieces, especially at the Galleria Vittorio Emanuele II. Built in 1877, it is one of the world's oldest shopping malls and takes opulence to the next level. The mall is in the shape of a cross and features a glass ceiling. Inside you'll find only high-end designers.

For even more shopping fun, head to the "Quadrilatero d'Oro," or Golden Rectangle, which includes Via della Spiga, Via Sant'Andrea and Via Montenapoleone. Admire luxury Italian brands like Prada, Versace, Armani and Dolce & Gabbana as you wander up and down the streets. You'll also find foreign luxury brands like Louis Vuitton, Chanel and so much more! Splurge on a statement piece or enjoy looking for free.

Parmigiana di Melanzane

Food

After admiring all the beautiful architecture and doing a little shopping, you should probably consider some refreshments. From Michelin-Star restaurants to local trattorias, Milan has something for everyone's tastes. Since there are so many Michelin-Star restaurants here, you might as well indulge. Enrico Bartolini al Mudec is the perfect place to experience haute cuisine. This three-star restaurant boasts a refined atmosphere, new flavors and food that is "perfectly encapsulating the Italian lifestyle."

If you want to enjoy an aperitivo, head to Fonderie Milanese. Relax outside as you enjoy your specialty cocktail and some light Milanese food. There are plenty of drink options as well as vegetarian options for the food. For a full sit-down meal, make reservations at Dongiò. Here you'll find Calabrian dishes like spaghetti alla tamarro, which is pasta, tomato sauce and nduja sausage. If you'd prefer to stay away from meat, try the parmigiana di melanzane, which is similar to the eggplant parmesan dish in America.

If you're only able to steal a few moments of bliss in Milan, be sure to use them to the fullest! Admire the incredible architecture, visit one of the largest cathedrals in the world and eat some of the most incredible food. Milan is full of incredible opportunities and just waiting for you to stop by. ■

TO KNOW ABOUT

ROAD TRIPPING with Kids

By Tamala Malerk

School is letting out soon and if you are planning a summertime road trip with kids, we've got 10 tips that may make the ride smoother.

Start small: If all your kids are used to is a neighborhood trip to the store, try branching out on two- to three-hour trips and then maybe an overnight trip before venturing out on a long-distance trip.

Assign them tasks: Before you go, give each kid an age-appropriate checklist to get them more involved with the whole experience. For example, put one in charge of making sure everyone has underwear. (Also, double-check everyone's checklist before final takeoff).

Change up the entertainment: Movies and shows can get old quickly for short attention spans. Bring along travel-friendly games and activities such as crossword puzzles or word searches. Have the kids pick out books from the library before you go

No. 3

Snacks: Pack finger-friendly snacks that are a mix of healthy items and treats. Have the kids help you pick out their snacks so they feel more in control. Make a "road trip" trail mix with the kids that is a blend of healthy and sweet that will make even the pickiest eaters smile.

Travel at night: If you have really young children, traveling after bedtime can help kids sleep along the way. Eat a nice hearty dinner and pack their favorite movie to watch before they fall asleep.

IV

Road trip bingo: Find or create road trip Bingo cards of things and places everyone might see on the drive (a dog in another vehicle, a McDonalds, etc.). Also, teach kids the license plate game (the international version is fun over here in Europe).

Hope for the best, prepare for the worst: Pack plenty of sanitation wipes, rubber gloves, hand sanitizer, sickness bags and towels. Older kids (and adults unfamiliar with where the nearest rest stop is) might appreciate a portable potty kit like the one from GoGirl or even a small portable toilet.

Eight

Plan your Stops: Is the world's largest twine ball five minutes off your route? Why not stop, stretch your legs, eat a sandwich and take a pic for the 'Gram (or Grandma)? Educate kids about the you'll be stopping at along the way to ramp up the excitement.

Vary up the accommodations:

- Stay at a cabin in a campground one night and a hotel with a pool the next. Make the overnight just as exciting (if not more) than daytime travel stops.

Create a reward system: Did the kids go three hours without fighting? Reward them with a pre-planned toy, a small activity of their choice or maybe a candy or popcorn snack to go with their next movie. ■

all the ways to do SPARGELZEIT

By Erica Fowler

My favorite season in Germany thus far is spring. Apart from the amiable weather and re-opening of outdoor activities, it is also when you will see more stalls selling fresh produce and flowers. April to June is prime time for a tasty vegetable that I hadn't tried until I got to Germany: white asparagus or "weißer Spargel." It has a sweeter flavor than green asparagus and can be quite tender, especially if you opt for the premium quality harvest. Here are a few dishes you must try that bring this delicately delicious "white gold" to new heights.

White Asparagus Soup

If you love a recipe that is hard to mess up, why not prepare these spears to be pureed into a flavorful soup? One might mistake it on sight for potato soup but will quickly find a creamy smoothness that goes quite well with a nice crusty bread. It's also a great excuse to use fresh herbs as a garnish on top.

The blog, A Sausage has Two, adapted a fantastic 6-serving recipe: www.asausagehastwo.com/white-asparagus-cream-soup

Better yet, check out Cooking the World's video on the best way to work with this beautiful vegetable.

Roasted White Asparagus

The classic way you will find white asparagus being served in German restaurants is as simple as possible. Roasted or pan-fried with butter, then blanketed with one of two well-known sauce variations:

Hollandaise Sauce: Egg yolks combined with butter, lemon and fresh herbs (like chives) with salt and pepper. Perfect for eggs and, of course, asparagus.

Bearnaise Sauce: Also egg yolks with butter, but with white wine, shallots, tarragon and chervil. Great for grilled meat or fish, too.

A plant-based option I have also drizzled over the top of roasted asparagus is a Tahini-Lemon sauce from the website Elle Republic: ellerepublic.de/en/roasted-white-asparagus-with-tahini-lemon-sauce

White Asparagus Salad

This salad with a zesty vinaigrette is a great chilled dish to serve on a warm day, using eggs and a generous sprinkle of chives. ■
